Draft Order Unshaken as Wheeler Bill Hearings End

Champion of Delay For Fathers Says Manpower Waste Is Widespread

Joint Senate and House Military Committees last night concluded hearings on the Wheeler bill without shaking Selective Service instructions to local draft boards to proceed with induction of 446,000 pre-Pearl Harbor fathers beginning October 1.

Through a second day of hammering examination by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, War Mobilization Adviser Bernard M. Baruch replied with many variations of the same answer: "Trust General Marshall—he is going to lead us soon on a very great adventure . . . He says he needs the men."

Manpower Waste Charged

But Baruch carried away with him a sheaf of letters Wheeler had read to the committee charging misuse of manpower in both the armed forces and war industry. He implied he would look into them. He told the committee he is going to have a talk with General Marshall, who already was "cognizant" of Wheeler's complaints. He indicated he would check some of Wheeler's specific charges of industrial manpower wastage.

To reporters, he said: "Don't exaggerate what I can do."

Baruch's retort to Wheeler that General Marshall knows his business, knows of war plans not available to the committee, and should receive unstinted support, drew spontaneous applause at one point.

"I see you brought your audience with you," snapped Wheeler. The Montanan, still smarting under Wednesday's unscheduled speech by a mother of four servicemen, struck again: "I hope you haven't any more of your plants with you."

Baruch merely smiled: "I know you are joking when you accuse me of that."

Important Proviso

Following the hearing, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, said there had been no change in September 15 instructions to local boards to start calling fathers October 1, but only after all nondeferred single men and childless married men had been called up.

Indications were that proportionately few fathers will be called

'Back the Attack'

Mighty Global Push Hinted By Marshall at Army Show

By Bert Kemmerer
Post Staff Writer

Hint of a mighty global push by the United Nations was given last night when Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff, told the great "Back the Attack" audience " . . . We are, for the first time since the war started, ready to deploy the tremendous American Army which the purchase of War Bonds has financed."

On the spacious stage of the Army show facing the arena, where many of the Nation's leaders have spoken during the past 15 days, General Marshall, whose future command has been widely discussed, said we face grim months of fighting on all fronts of the globe.

Forty-nine thousand persons heard the leader of history's mightiest American Army. His address was broadcast to the Nation over the Blue network.

"Last week," he said, "we secured our landings on the Italian mainland against determined resistance on the beaches. In company with the British Eighth Army, our Fifth Army is now starting its offensive toward Naples and Rome.

"Our air war on the Continent from British bases grows in intensity week by week.

"In the Southwest Pacific and the Solomons our advances have been accelerated greatly, and in the China-Burma theater we are getting into position to carry heavy fighting to the Japanese . . ."

General Marshall pointed out the "Back the Attack" exhibits offer thousands of Americans the opportunity of seeing the powerful weapons and superb equipment which their purchases of war bonds are providing.

He said in the wastage of every conceivable type of military equipment, this war surpassed any in the history of the world, that no previous war has approached such requirements as the present awful struggle.

"Tanks, jeeps, trucks, airplanes and artillery are inevitably destroyed by the hundreds on the battlefield," said General Marshall "even when the going is good . . .

"The weapons and equipment must be replaced without delay if the advance is to continue and if we are to give the soldiers who depend on these weapons a fair break on the battlefield."

The Chief of Staff said there would be no end to these requirements for weapons until the final battle is completed in victory.

"The American people must give not only their full personal effort but the full use of their dollars invested in War Bonds to back these attacks," he explained.

"The toll will mount with the increased size of the opposing forces engaged as we drive deeper into

Hospital Investigators Queries 'Interest' Of Commissioners

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer.

A sweeping check-up on the District Commissioners, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer; Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, and other executives of the city government was announced yesterday by Sentaor Holman (Republican) of Oregon, chairman of the subcommittee investigating conditions at Gallinger.

"The situation goes beyond conditions in one hospital," Holman declared. "I want to find out whether the officials of the District are doing their job because of interest and zeal, or just to collect their pay checks. You can't get improvements, unless there is spirit in your work."

Mason Sends Report

Meanwhile Commissioner Guy Mason replied under the 36-hour deadline set Tuesday by Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee for a report on Gallinger. Mason sent a copy simultaneously to Holman, who had made a similar request for information on other investigations and inspections of the institution.

In an attached letter addressed to McCarran, Mason said: "If you will kindly indicate the character of inspections or investigations of Gallinger Hospital, I will be glad to answer same specifically. I have made several inspections; none had to do with complaints."

The report to Holman from Mason said: "My observations concerning Gallinger Hospital are that in the light of all obstacles encountered, at least since Pearl Harbor, the hospital has rendered excellent service."

In direct answer to questions from the Oregon Senator, Mason declared: "I made one visit to Gallinger late in 1941, some four or five visits in 1942, and three so far this year. Some of these visits were made in connection with efforts to provide additional facili-

Mine Pay Rise Agreement Put Up to WLB

Illinois Miners Scrap 7-Hour Day To Gain Increase

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The United Mine Workers yesterday signed a contract with Illinois coal operators scrapping the union's prized seven-hour day, but providing a $1.75 daily pay increase for underground workers.

The established practice of paying coal miners only for time spent actually mining coal was abandoned in the agreement in favor of a strict "portal to portal" arrangement and an 8½-hour day, exclusive of a 30-minute lunch period. Payment would be made for both underground travel time and actual productive time at present work-time pay rates.

Travel time accounts for part of the extra 1½ hours, with the remainder, additional work time, varying from 30 to 70 minutes a day, depending on the individual mine, a UMW spokesman said.

UMW President John L. Lewis and George F. Campbell, president of the Illinois Coal Operators Association, submitted the agreement to the War Labor Board for approval with the understanding it would not go into effect until the Office of Price Administration approved a price boost to cover added costs—estimated by Campbell at 20 to 23 cents a ton.

Informed Government officials said the proposed two-year contract had a better chance of receiving WLB approval than any previous proposal advanced by the UMW since the coal controversy started last spring. The WLB began immediate consideration of the agreement with labor representatives vigorously urging its approval, it was learned.

Former Senator Edward R. Burke, spokesman for the Southern Appalachian coal operators, promptly denounced the Illinois pact as just "another attempt to circumvent the War Labor Board" and predicted that other union groups would demand substantial

Next Civilian Shoe Stamp To Cover Six-Month Period

A new shoe ration stamp will become valid November 1 for a six-month period, instead of the present four-month interval, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday, simultaneously extending indefinitely the current stamp —No. 18 in War Ration Book One.

The current stamp was due to expire on October 31, but OPA feared that a buying run would set in as the expiration date approached with many persons buying shoes unnecessarily.

Instead, Stamp 18 will overlap with the new one—Stamp 1 on the "airplane" sheet in War Ration Book Three—providing a pool of shoe stamps, permitting the planning of needs over a longer period, OPA said.

OPA pointed out that shoes have been rationed at the rate of 35 million pairs a month, compared to prospects that only 25 million pairs will be available during the next few months.

The cut in civilian shoe rations is necessary, the agency said, because of "heavy drains for military purposes, greatly reduced leather supplies and manpower shortages."

Simultaneously, it was learned that the War Production Board's Office of Civilian Requirements is working on plans to ease the pinch on the shoe supply.

WPB is considering encouraging the manufacture of shoes with buna-S synthetic rubber soles to stretch short supplies of the tough leather needed for soles, permitting the manufacture of more shoes and making more sole leather available for repair of shoes in use.

Tests of buna-S shoe soles indictate that they will outwear ordinary leather soles.

Plans also are being developed to manufacture quantities of non-rationed canvas-top sneaker-type shoes for children and similar sport shoes for women, thus tak-

Aussies Push Ahead

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Friday), Sept. 24.—Australians who landed from the sea 6 miles north of Finschhafen, New Guinea, Wednesday have pushed resisting Japanese southward, reached the airdrome only 2 miles north of the base, and placed the coastal town under artillery fire.

Headquarters announced these developments today in a communique which also disclosed that a heavy air engagement ensued the day of the landing in which 40 Japanese planes were downed and 5 others probably were destroyed. Three Allied planes were lost.

Headquarters also disclosed a preliminary count since July 1 of more than 6300 Japanese dead in the fighting which resulted in Allied capture of Lae and Salamaua. This total, coupled with a previous estimate of 6000 killed in that area before July 1, raised the figure to more than 12,000. Six hundred more Japanese are "being hunted down in the hills above Lae," the communique said. Japanese forces have been estimated at 20,000 in the Lae-Salamaua area.

MacArthur's Position

Shelling warships and bombing planes provided cover for Wednesday's landings.

Capture of Finschhafen would put MacArthur in a strong position, if he chose, to strike at crescent-shaped New Britain which, in turn, outflanks Bougainville, principal Japanese holding in the Solomons.

The Japanese airforce began attempts to intercept the ships off Finschhafen in mid-morning Wednesday. The landings began at dawn. Two of the first attacking planes were shot down from high altitude.

The big fight occurred at noon. Japanese planes attacked landing craft.

Antiaircraft guns on American warships put up a heavy fire. Allied fighters engaged in a 25-minute battle.

Headquarters said not a ship or passenger was damaged or injured. (The Tokyo radio said that

Desperate Measure

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 23.—German torch and dynamite crews demolished the Naples waterfront, scuttled 30 ships to block the harbor and wrecked industrial and rail centers in the great Italian metropolis in apparent preparation for evacuation as Allied armies lunged tonight within sight and sound of the wholesale destruction.

The battle for Corsica was in its final stage. French troops and American Rangers closed in on Bastia, northeast port of the Napoleonic island, and Allied navies and air forces clamped on a tight blockade, cutting off German escape. Gen. Henri Giraud, French commander in chief who returned by air from a two-day trip to Corsica, predicted that all Germans on the island would be ousted or killed in "from 10 to 15 days."

Advances of from 10 to 15 miles in central and southern Italy put great chunks of land behind the straightening Allied lines.

Nazi Flank Turned Inland

The whole German left flank in the Salerno area, 20 to 40 miles south of Naples, was pried loose and turned inland. The American Fifth and British Eighth Armies were advancing and forcing Marshal Albert Kesselring to draw grudgingly back on the interior approaches to flaming Naples.

Ginosa, Avigliano and Acerno fell.

(The British radio said Auletta and Contursi had been captured. Auletta is 36 miles southeast of Salerno on the road to Potenza. Contursi is 26 miles southeast of Salerno, and there the Germans admitted a dent made by the enemy in our positions.")

A French communique said the Germans lost heavily in men and material near the tiny Corsican seaport of Solenzara, 60 miles south of Bastia on the east coast. A small number of Rangers are fighting alongside the French and Corsican patriots in the battle. Bastia was bombed again, and flight routes between Corsica and Leghorn and Elba were constantly patrolled. The French bulletin said:

Allied navies and air forces are maintaining a very effective blockade of the eastern coast of the is-

Allied Planes Again Blasting At Europe After Day Assault

London, (Friday), Sept. 24.—A great concentration of British bombers made a pulverizing assault against Hitler's west wall defenses between Dunkerque and Calais early today while another strong force roared out for a new and deeper assault within the Continent.

Great explosions shook the English coast 20 miles away. Scores of enemy searchlights and bursting shells stabbed the skies while the bombers poured tons of explosives on the fortifications guarding the French invasion coast.

The roar of heavy bombers as they went out in a long procession over Dover Straits continued more than an hour. Within a few minutes after the flights started, the Berlin, Koenigsberg, Leipsig, Paris and Luxembourg radios fell silent.

These night assaults climaxed a tremendous 24-hour bombing offensive—perhaps the greatest yet—against German Continental air and sea bases and industrial targets on a front 500 miles long and more than 200 miles deep from the west coast of France to the north coast of Germany.

German planes made insignificant raids on areas of east Anglia and the northeast coast. Neither property damage nor casualties were reported.

The U. S. Eighth Air Force staged its first double-header in 14 months of operations with twin daylight raids on the Nazi submarine base at Nantes by Flying Fortresses, while Marauders ranged deep into France for two attacks on German airfields.

A joint British and American communique said the Fortresses in the morning attack on shipyards at Nantes destroyed nine enemy fighters while four more fell to the guns of escorting American Thunderbolts. Two more Nazi fighters were shot down in a Fortress raid on the Kerlin-Bastard Airfield in France.

A communique telling of late afternoon attacks, said airfields near Rennes, Lille, Abbeville and

Poltava Taken; Kiev Pincers Draw Closer As Reds Roll On

London, Sept. 23.—The Red Army smashed to within artillery range of Smolensk today, further flanked Kiev, and toppled the Ukraine citadel of Poltava to engulf German defenses along a 300-mile stretch just short of the middle Dnieper River.

A Soviet communique announced the capture of Buzanovo, 9 miles northeast of the German central stronghold of Smolensk, and Pochinok, 19 miles to the southeast, as Soviet armies plunging westward overran 863 more towns and villages along the huge front.

Surging toward White Russia, the Red Army also captured Unecha, rail junction midway between Bryansk and Gomel, and the Moscow radio said Soviet troops already had crossed into that territory adjoining Poland.

A Berlin broadcast acknowledged the peril to Smolensk, Kiev, Cherkasi, and other Eastern Front bastions; admitted the loss of Poltava, said Soviet troops had broken into Roslavl below Smolensk and also stated "a few small" Russian detachments had reached the Dnieper River.

Gigantic Campaign, Nazi Admits

The German military commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, said the Red Army's offensive was "the most gigantic of the entire eastern campaign," and that the wide Soviet pinchers move on the Ukraine capital of Kiev was being pressed with "extraordinary violence."

Sertorius said German troops were "systematically disengaging themselves," but gave no hint as to where the German high command would decide to make a definite stand.

The Russians now have plunged so far westward that eastern Prussia, the Baltic states, Rumania and Axis targets in Poland and Hungary are within easy Soviet bomber range for the coming three-sided Allied effort to smash the entire German "roof" this winter. The Ploetsi oil fields in Rumania are only 435 air miles from the advancing Russians.

Moscow dispatches said the battle for Dnepropetrovsk had begun with the Red army attacking less than 13 miles from that city, which was the site of Russia's big hydro-electric works. Zaporozhe, to the south, also was imperiled by Soviet units attacking eight miles away.

One German broadcast recorded by the Associated Press also indicated that the Russians had pushed along the Sea of Azov coast 85 miles west of Nogaisk, taken Saturday, to reach Genichevsk, only nine miles from the Melitopol-Crimean railway. It said German naval units had "bombarded Russian positions" at Genichevsk.

Of the gains ranging from three to 12 miles in the six key sectors, the Russians made their greatest stride in the push toward Gomel, said the communique recorded here by the Soviet monitor.

Unecha's fall in that area represented a 73-mile advance from fallen Bryansk by the army of Gen. M. M. Popov.

The fall of Poltava also was announced in an order of the day by Marshal Joseph Stalin, who

Giraud Brings Tale of Revolt To Oust Nazis From Corsica

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 23.—The first-hand story of how Corsicans boldly planned and bravely executed their military revolt to rid their island home of Germans was brought back today by Gen. Henri Giraud, French commander in chief, who spent two days there.

Giraud's spokesman was Gen. Rene Chambe, who related that Giraud flew to Corsica unannounced last Tuesday night, arriving at dawn, despite the admonition of his staff that the trip was too dangerous for him to undertake.

(The Algiers radio quoted Gen. Charles de Gaulle, co-president with General Giraud of the French Committee of National Liberation, as saying that "important" French forces were ready to take part in the battle of Italy.

("The whole of France," he said, "rejoices because Corsica is basking in the sun of liberation.")

Chambe said a young captain, Colonna D'Istria, scion of one of the oldest families on Corsica, organized the revolt. He landed on Corsica last February from a French submarine on the orders of Giraud and maintained constant radio contact with Giraud in Algiers.

Now the intrepid Captain D'Istria is ill in a hospital at Ajaccio, where he was decorated by Giraud on his visit.

Since February 10,000 Corsicans had been armed with Tommyguns dropped by parachute or brought by submarines.

Giraud found that when French troops first began to land, the Germans attacked with tanks in an attempt to get Ajaccio, but that the Corsican partisans had beaten off the attack at Cauro and started a German retreat which never stopped.

Chambe said a small unit of American Rangers was employed near Bastia, but he did not know how they fared.

The Corsican partisans ranged in age from 15 to 75 and wore armbands with the initials "FT" meaning franc-tireur (guerilla fighter) and knew if the Germans caught them they would be shot.

In the village of Levie, Giraud praised a boy of 15 and an old man of 75, each of whom had killed three Germans.

From this tiny village 400 partisans were recruited by a young French lieutenant who donned civilian clothes to lead them on a series of forays.

Chambe said there are 80,000 Italians on the island who are taking orders from the French, but that only a handful are fighting the Germans.

"We have put them to work rebuilding roads and bridges and they must leave Corsica as soon as transport ation can be arranged," Chambe said at a press conference in the palace where Darlan was shot.

MacArthur's Field All His, Stimson Says

No 'Overlapping' With Mountbatten; Strategy General's

By William Frye
Associated Press Staff Writer

Gen. Douglas MacArthur suggested the strategy now used against the Japanese in the Pacific, it was said in high quarters yesterday, and the major blows at present are being delivered under his immediate command.

At the same time, Secretary of War Stimson asserted that the commands of MacArthur in the Southwest Pacific and of Lord Louis Mountbatten in southeast Asia do not overlap.

The question of the extent of MacArthur's command, and of the extent to which his advice has been heeded or ignored by the high command, drew attention because of the statement issued by MacArthur two days ago, implying that he has been relegated to a subordinate position and that his plans for smashing at the vitals of the enemy have been bypassed for a more cautious approach.

Public Furor Stirred

The statement stirred up a public furor, coming as it did on the eve of expected big offensives against the Japanese, not only in the Pacific, but under Mountbatten's command in Burma and the Indian Ocean, where the end of the monsoon season this month opens the weather for large-scale operations.

If MacArthur's statement puzzled the public, it seemed to puzzle Washington officialdom fully as much. The impression now, however, is that it was directed, not at the Allied high command, but at comments of Australian news-

Slovene Forces Take Idria; Croats Hit Rail Yards

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 23. — Slovene troops of the Yugoslav army were reported tonight to have penetrated the Italian Adriatic port of Trieste, fighting the German garrison there with the aid of inhabitants.

Yugoslavs having communication with partisan armies fighting bloody battles in northwestern Yugoslavia said other Slovene formations occupied Idria, 30 miles northeast of Trieste and 50 miles north of Fiume, exerting pressure on both Italian ports.

Elsewhere troops were said to be fighting heavy engagements on a 50-mile front from Bistrica to Ljubljana.

Fiume Is Shelled

(The Algiers radio said the Yugoslavs were shelling Fiume from Susak, just across the frontier, and reported street fighting in Trieste. The broadcast was repeated by BBC, which was recorded by CBS.)

An area 55 miles north of Durazzo was reported under siege by Montenegrins after they captured the coast town of Ucinj and the summer resort of Petrovac. The Italian "Taurinence" division, with its commanding general was said to have gone over to Yugoslav partisan units now fighting the Germans.

Moscow Youth Plays; Katia, Blinded by Nazis, Just Stares

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Sept. 23.—In Moscow, as in all the great cities which have felt the heart tug of war, there are street scenes daily which bring close the horror of the fighting.

The time was late afternoon. The golden rays of the setting sun cut slantwise across the old Smolensk road, down which the army of Napoleon once so ignobly withdrew from Moscow. Children played in its faint warming glow.

The games were the same as might have been played in New Orleans, Richmond, New York, Chicago, Des Moines, San Francisco or any place in the United States. But sitting to one side were two tots who didn't play.

One was a boy about 7, the other a girl about 9. They sat silently in a window which was almost level with the street. The boy held the girl's hand.

The girl's little white face was turned toward the sun. She sat there as if spellbound. You wondered why the sun didn't hurt her eyes.

You stopped and talked as you would to a couple of children anywhere. There were the usual questions—What is your name? How old are you? Is this your sister? Is this your brother?

They were brother and sister and their names were Katia and Vovo.

Suddenly with horrible clarity you realized why Katia was staring into the sun and not blinking or squinting—Katia was blind.

Vovo was full of quiet information.

His father? No, he did not have a father any more. He was killed by the Germans. His mother? The last he had seen of her was when an aunt took him and his sister from their home in Smolensk. His mother was sick and some two Allied cruisers were set on fire and other ships damaged.)

Allied medium units and attack planes, closely supporting the landings, dropped 21 tons of bombs and fired 48,000 rounds of ammunition.

The biggest Japanese air force blow was aimed while the American warships were withdrawing.

"Twenty to 30 enemy bombers, covered by 30 to 40 fighters attacked," the communique related.

"Our fighter cover intercepted with complete success, not a ship or passenger being damaged or injured."

The pilot of one of the three Allied planes downed was saved.

In addition to the Australians moving south on Finschhafen, another force stands between it and Lae, having landed there September 4 to open the operations which ended in Lae's capture September 16.

Lae, an air base, Salamaua an air and sea base, together with Finschhafen, bound the Huon Gulf.

The heavy air losses of the enemy at Finschhafen strongly indicated the Japanese air force rendered virtually impotent over New Guinea during the closing stages of the Lae-Salamaua fight, has been reinforced and intends to strongly resist the latest MacArthur moves.

Only 85 miles northeast of Finschhafen, the enemy airdrome at Cape Gloucester, New Britain, has been dealt its third heavy bombing since Sunday. Ninety-four tons of explosives were dropped there and on Finschhafen in the latest raids.

The Japanese Air Force attacked the Allied base of Buna on the Papuan Peninsula of New Guinea, the Nadzab air strip 20 miles up the Markham Valley from Lae, the American airfield at Munda on New Georgia in the Solomons and other American positions on Vella Lavella.

North of Australia, Liberators raiding the Kai Islands shot down six Japanese planes.

The latest Cape Gloucester raid occurred on the day the Australians went ashore above Finschhafen, lasted four hours and had as its primary object pinning down any enemy planes there which might otherwise be used to interfere with the amphibious operation. Seventy-three tons of bombs and 15,000 rounds of ammunition destroyed a grounded plane, hit antiaircraft positions and exploded fuel dumps.

The landing above Finchhafen, together with the consolidation by airborne Australian troops of their hold on Kaiapit, 60 miles northwest of Lae, finds the Japanese facing two new threats to their already shaky perimeter in the island arc above Australia.

Finschhafen itself, which once was the center of German missionary activity, is only 85 miles from Cape Gloucester on New Britain, across the vital Vitiaz Strait.

The rehabilitation of its airstrip would provide additional cover for Allied bombers in their increasingly heavy attacks on enemy bases in this area.

(The Navy Department in Washington announced that on September 21 12 or 16 enemy bombers made the largest raid in many weeks on Guadalcanal, causing light damage near the airstrip but no casualties. Fighter planes shot down two.)

Reds Enter White Russia

saluted the army of Gen. Ivan S. Konev. Its conquest removed the last major enemy bastion stemming the Russian development of the northern side of the Dneiper bend. The next Soviet goal in the area is Kremenchug, 60 miles below Poltava.

Kiev Situation Critical

Far to the west the German situation at Kiev was particularly critical, Moscow dispatches said.

The Russians are deployed along a crescent position northeast, east and southeast of the rich Ukraine capital which had a peacetime population of two million. The Russians at one point are within 18 miles of Kiev.

The Red army now is in a position to make a bid for at least three bridges across the Dnieper, and begin a great encircling movement, these dispatches said. One bridge is west of Chernigov, whose capture was announced Wednesday, another is 21 miles southwest of Pereyaslav and the third is southwest of Olotonosha.

Pereyaslav is 40 miles southeast of Kiev and only five miles from the Dnieper; Olotonosha, farther to the southeast, is only 12 miles from the crossing leading to Cherkasi, springboard to an extensive rail network inside the Dneiper bend. A Russian push across the river at these two points would imperil not only Kev, but sizable German forces inside the Dnieper elbow.

Hankow Is Placed Under Martial Law

Chungking, Sept. 23 (AP).—Clashes between Japanese soldiers and puppet Chinese police in the great Central China City of Hankow has led to the imposition of martial law on that city, dispatches said today.

the Netherlands town of Schelde were attacked.

Fighters, escorting the bombers, made extensive sweeps over northern France, destroying nine enemy fighters which made a total of 24 for the day. Two of the raiding bombers and four fighters were reported missing, bringing the totals to three bombers and six fighters lost during the day. The pilots of two of the fighters were safe.

Of the No. 2 daylight raid on Nantes, the communique said simply that the Fortresses "made a second heavy attack on the docks and shipyards."

In addition to the double blow by the Fortresses at Nantes, the widespread operations were highlighted by the RAF's heavy, concentrated raid Wednesday night on the industrial and railway center of Hanover, in which a great tonnage of bombs was dropped in 30 minutes.

The Germans threw up a considerable swarm of fighters in an effort to stave off today's assaults on the Nantes area, but only one Fortress was lost in the morning assault.

The Fortress fleet often has hit several different targets in a day, but this was the first time it had hammered the same target twice in a day.

The blows fell with triphammer rapidity between Wednesday evening and dusk Thursday and the drive apparently continued into the night.

Here was the path of destruction from the North Sea to the Bay of Biscay:

Hanover—Metropolis of about 500,000 west of Berlin on the key Berlin-Cologne four-track, east-west railroad line; site of Germany's largest rubber works and big locomotive and tank plants.

Emden—North Sea port and naval base.

Oldenburg—Important military and communications center west of Bremen.

Nantes—French Atlantic port and key base for Nazi submarines, attacked twice by Fortresses.

Vannes-Leucon—Coastal air base 70 miles northwest of Nantes, attacked by the Fortresses.

Kerlin-Bastard—Air base further northwest, near Brest, hit by a collateral branch of Fortresses.

Beauvais-Tille—French air base received its sixth pasting this month.

Evreaux-Fauville—Air base 45 miles northwest of Paris, hit by U. S. Marauders Wednesday.

Brest—Air base hit simultaneously by RAF Typhoons.

Conches—Air base 60 miles west of Paris, hit by U. S. Marauders Thursday. Sixty-fifth target for the Marauders in little over two months.

Air bases in northwest Germany and France—hit by RAF night Intruders.

The big RAF night attack on Hanover was officially described only as a "very strong force" of bombers, but it was authoritatively estimated that more than 2000 tons of explosives might have been dropped in the half hour's duration of the raid. This would mean more than 65 tons a minute—15 more per minute than during the record attack on Hamburg.

The RAF lost 26 bombers last night. The Marauders in their push through nearly to Paris knocked out 11 planes of the Germans' interference.

east of Banja Luka, a Yugoslav authority here said.

There were some estimates that the war equipment of about four out of 20 Italian divisions in the northern part of the country had now fallen into the hands of the Yugoslavs.

(The British radio said "at least seven separate engagements are now being fought in the Fiume area." It said Idria was the seat of one of the biggest mercury mines in Europe.)

Unite for Revenge

Bern, Switzerland, Sept. 23 (AP).—Nazis and Fascists have joined hands in a program of revenge against Italian anti-Fascists, reports at the Italian frontier said today.

When the men sought are not found, the reports said, their homes are stripped and members of the families held as hostages.

Burma Ripe for Invasion Now, Task Force Chief Declares

By James E. Brown
International News Service Staff Writer

New Delhi, Sept. 23.—"Burma is ripe for invasion."

That was the statement today of Col. Cecil E. Combs, 31, of San Antonio, Tex., commander of the India Air Task Force of the Tenth Air Force. Col. Combs, who is returning to the United States for a brief stay, has been since the war began on uninterrupted active service in the Philippines, China, the Middle East, and India and Burma.

"Our bombing operations in Burma will show results when the push starts," said Col. Combs. "It has not been spectacular but I believe the capacity of Japanese communications such as railroads, bridges, and dock installations has been cut about two-thirds, and that will show when the enemy suddenly needs to use those communications.

"We have made it costly for the Japanese to bring ships into Rangoon. The tonnage has been negligible since the first of March, but up until then the Japs were shipping about 25,000 tons weekly into Rangoon. We recently sank two ships out of a convoy of four that tried to run the blockade into Rangoon.

"Our own rate of loss has been low. In one month we lost only three bombers—all due to bad weather. We fly right through during the monsoon, and all our operations are carried out without fighter escort."

Rail Yards Battered

New Delhi, Sept. 23 (AP).—Flying through improving monsoon weather, American medium and heavy bombers and RAF Beaufighters heavily attacked communications and military installations in Japanese-occupied Burma.

A U.S. Air communique today announced "good results" in a medium bomber raid yesterday on freight yards at Sedaw, while B-24 heavy bombers demolished buildings and trackage in the Mandalay area.

All of the American planes returned safely.

The principal British raids were in the Katha district, along the Irrawaddy River, and on Chedubs Island along the coast.

160 Japs Sent Home

Montevideo, Uruguay, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Swedish liner Gripsholm sailed today with more than 160 Japanese diplomats, businessmen and journalists from the United States and Chile en route to Goa, Portuguese India, where a diplomatic exchange will be made with North and South American residents of the Far East.

papers opposed to the government of Prime Minister Curtin.

These papers had asserted that Mountbatten would overshadow, and might even supersede MacArthur—a development, incidentally which would have been as unpopular in Australia as in this country. Furthermore, they tagged MacArthur with sponsoring "island hopping" strategy.

The latter alone was enough to infuriate MacArthur, who has consistently opposed the tedious process of tightening the ring around Japan by methodical seizure of island outposts, and has instead advocated what he terms broad and massive strategic strokes. However curious its terms, then, MacArthur's statement is regarded here as an answer to Australian newspapers—and possibly also to similar implications in a statement made in the Southwest Pacific by Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky.

In the wake of all the clamor over what MacArthur might have meant, it can be stated on high, if unquotable, authority:

(1) There is at present no controversy between MacArthur and the War Department, between MacArthur and the high command.

(2) Nothing happened at Quebec to change MacArthur's status, the Quebec conference confining itself—as far as the war with Japan is concerned—to plans affecting Mountbatten's new command and to operations in China.

(3) As far as operations in the southwest and South Pacific, and the coordinated operations in the Central Pacific, are concerned, the broad decisions were reached at Casablanca. Details were settled at a conference of Pacific staff officers in Washington last spring.

MacArthur's plan was adopted virtually intact, and MacArthur is now engaged in carrying it out. Northern Pacific operations are outside his realm.

Geographically, the extent of MacArthur's command was made clearer by a London announcement yesterday that Mountbatten's southeast Asia theater stops at a line running south from Indo-China through the China Sea, passing between Sumatra and Java. Eastward of this line, and to Guadalcanal island in the Solomons, the responsibility is MacArthur's.

Eventually, some adjustment of responsibilities may have to be made, but both MacArthur and Mountbatten must retake large portions of conquered territory before their respective theaters can conceivably overlap.

Both apparently aim at an eventual break-through into the China Sea, where the shipping life line between Japan and the rich territories she has seized could be cut by sea and air action.

As MacArthur's campaign in New Guinea and the Solomons grows, however, it suggests that a "massive blow" he has in mind might be to break through the island defenses of the enemy by seizing or neutralizing Rabaul on New Britain, giving the fleet access to the relatively open stretches of the Pacific north of New Guinea.

With the Japanese chain of landing fields broken, and Allied bases established along New Guinea's north coast, an Allied fleet conceivably could enter these waters under the protecting cover of shore-based aircraft, and force the enemy fleet out of Truk—which would be threatened—for a showdown.

Graziani Joins Duce's Regime, Nazis Announce

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 23.—The Berlin radio said today in a Rome dispatch that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani had become minister of defense in "the new Fascist government" headed by Benito Mussolini as Premier and Foreign Minister.

The Berlin broadcast said Guido Buffarini, former undersecretary of the interior, had been named interior minister, and former Undersecretary of Finance Domenico Pellegrini, finance minister.

Graziani, one of the Italian army's highest ranking officers, had previously held a number of posts, including the viceroyship of Ethiopia and the governorship of Libya.

Other appointments included many men of unknown ability.

Hollow Structure

By the Associated Press

Benito Mussolini's "new Fascist government," announced yesterday from Berlin, looks from this distance like a rather hollow propaganda structure erected by the Germans.

Legally, one Washington authority said, all the members of this new Fascist creation, from Mussolini down, are traitors, liable to execution by the Italians should they be captured by the Allies. They have violated the armistice signed by the legitimately-constituted Badoglio government.

Marshal Graziani's appointment as minister of defense was surprising. He was supposedly in disgrace after his implied criticism of the Mussolini regime in his 1941 report explaining how the British defeated the Italians in Cyrenaica.

At that low ebb in Italian fortunes which brought the Germans into North Africa, Graziani resigned.

Considered a good general militarily, Graziani has an unsavory reputation for ruthlessness. Natives in Libya called him the "white devil," and attributed to him the practice of dropping rebel chieftains from airplanes in the pacification of that territory.

Interesting and perhaps significant was the abandonment by Mussolini of the defense and interior portfolios, which he always held before his fall from power last July 25, and his assumption only of the premiership and foreign affairs.

With German threats to purge the territory under Nazi control of anti-Fascists, the designation of Gen. Antonio Tringali-Casanova as minister of justice has sinister implications. A general in the Fascist militia, he used to preside over the special tribunal which arbitrarily tried persons suspected of "crimes against the state," such as espionage, anti-Fascist underground activities, sabotage and plots against Mussolini.

Blind Katia Does Not Play

friends were taking her away in a truck. Yes, there was a lot of bombing and shooting that day in Smolensk—that day a couple of years ago.

As her brother talked of bombs, Katia turned her little head.

"I could see before the bombs," she said.

That was one of those statements that you don't answer—or don't know how to answer.

The boy said he and his sister were sitting in the sunlight while his aunt put her other children to bed and fed them.

"She's got three besides us," Katia volunteered, "but I am more trouble than the baby because I can't see."

It was very heartening to hear the Moscow radio announce that Demidov, just northwest of Smolensk had fallen to the Red Army. I hope someone told Katia.

Alexander Thanks Spaatz for Aid

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, deputy Allied Commander in Chief in the Mediterranean area, has sent a message of thanks to Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the Northwest African Air Force, expressing the United States Fifth Army's thanks and appreciation "for the magnificent air support given them" during the Salerno operations, it was announced here today.

Will Stay in Germany

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The seat of the "new republican Fascist government" set up under the premiership of Benito Mussolini is to be established temporarily in southern Germany because of war hazards in Italian territory, the Berlin radio said tonight.

Airman Home on Wing, Prayer

By Hanson H. Hathaway
Post Staff Writer

This was the twentieth mission for him, and thirtieth for old Blue Streak, veteran Flying Fortress of the Middle East Ninth Air Force, and Lieut. Frank Fenwick of 1531 Park rd. nw., was "jittering up" again.

FENWICK

Taranto was a bluish speck in the distance and Grottaglie Airdrome, lay slightly east of the city. The 25-year-old bombardier fixed the nearing airdrome in the bombsight and called for the run across the target.

Enemy In Wait

The enemy was there above them. Safe in the sun the two score M. E. 109's aligned their course and adjusted air-speed to hover like calculating hawks over the American Fortresses.

In the nose of the Blue Streak, Fenwick made his lightning fast last minute calculations, and pressed the bomb release buttons. The bombs fell away, a stick of 10, making dog-tail wags as they slipped down.

Timing and aim were perfect. As the Blue Streak roared past the target and came around in a mile-long sweep of ack ack blossoming sky, Fenwick saw great fire rings shudder up from the wreckage-strewn drome, caught glimpses of grounded planes hurtled in mad pinwheel gyrations on the lower horizons.

"The target had come in nicely," Fenwick related. The ship jumped as she always did with bombs away, but this time she fell off in a 1000 dive. She was temporarily out of control. I looked out and saw number 4 engine had stopped, and half of the right wing was shot away."

With hairline accuracy the seven Nazi's had let go on their cold meat," to send two stricken Fortresses tumbling like elongated rocks down through the ack ack.

Out of formation, and with no help to be expected, the Blue Streak crew prepared for the inevitable. It came in a second sky-shaking exploding cluster of fragmentation bombs. The Blue Streak shivered with the fabric and steel tearing impact of the bombs loosed on her helpless body. Later they were to count 150 holes in her.

"We couldn't fight them under these conditions," said the blond, blue-eyed air hero who wears the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with seven oak leaf clusters.

"We went out of there on one wing and a flock of prayers, every man in the Fortress convinced this was it. But," he added, reminiscently, "our planes are tough"

500 Miles to Home

Home was a return flight of 500 miles across the Mediterranean, in a ship that should have never gone farther than the impassive earth that lay below them there near Taranto. But, home they went to make a terse entry in the ship's log:

"Mission completed. Target destroyed."

Fenwick has been home since Wednesday last, having flown from Cairo, Egypt, in four days to land at Miami, Fla., and call his mother, Mrs. Frank Fenwick, sr. He kept a diary of his experiences. In it are startling jottings.

It reveals that this young bombardier, graduate of Gonzaga High School and of Georgetown University, where he was a crack football tackle, personally sent 200,000 pounds of bombs down on German and Italian objectives. His Fortress was in all the preinvasion flights over Italy. He has 30 successful bombing missions completed to his credit. There is not a city in Greece, Sicily, the Middle East or Italy that has figured in Fortress bombardment news on which he has not dropped his steel messengers of enemy destruction.

He was in the first flight over Rome. He recalls flying over the Vatican and then watching his bombs hit their target, "a strategic installation."

Plane Factory Smashed

First time told was his story of the destruction wrought on the Blue Streak squadron's longest run. It was from Bengasi to a point outside Vienna, Austria, to destroy the Weiner-Neustadt factory, makers of Messerschmitts.

"The Germans thought the works were too far away for successful bombing," Fenwick said. "Were they surprised?"

"Did you destroy them?"

"Did we? They'll never make another M. E. there in this war."

Back home to teach other young Americans to fight in foreign war skies, Lieutenant Fenwick made this startling prediction:

"Germany won't last another four months. With Italian air bases being readied on one side, Russia on another and England on a third, Germany's going to get the damnedest pounding. It's going to be murderous. They couldn't take it more than four months. Nobody could."

ties and personnel to meet the war impact.

"No major complaint of Gallinger Hospital's operation, except by the General Accounting Office, has been made to the Commissioners during my tenure of office. The only major complaint was made by R. E. Seelig (secretary to Senator Bone of Washington)."

Concerning the number of patients, Mason asserted that "the patient load has increased from 843 per day to 1051 currently." He added that 65 per cent of the positions of general nurses are unfilled, which is 40.6 per cent of the positions required, and that 41 student nurse positions are unfilled, which is 19 per cent of the total required for ward service.

In 1941, he said, there was an average of 225 cases of tuberculosis, contrasted to the average of 288 in 1942 and 288 in July and August of this year, a gain of 25 per cent over two years ago.

"We are concerned not only with the administration of Gallinger Hospital but of the Health Department, of which Gallinger, Glenn Dale and Upshur st. are units. In the last analysis, the Commissioners are not technical men, that is, in the sense of operating any part of the Health Department. We must look to the head of the department (Dr. Ruhland) to see that each unit of his department functions with the highest degree of efficiency."

Construction at Gallinger during the past year included these items, Mason said:

Maternity ward (capacity 150), $431,000; interns' quarters (capacity 38), $50,000; nurses' quarters (capacity 38), $50,000; venereal disease clinic (capacity 100), $83,000; renovations in heating plant, $25,000.

Senator Holman meanwhile asked J. G. Sourwine, counsel to the Senate District Committee, for biographical sketches on the Commissioners, Dr. Ruhland, Dr. Bocock, and "other executives" whose names he did not reveal.

He added that he plans to confer with a group of "responsible and intelligent residents of the District to find out if they are satisfied with the present form of government in the city. None will be connected in any way with either the Federal or District Government, he emphasized.

OPA emphasized that the new order should not be interpreted to mean the civilian ration had been set at two pairs of shoes a year, adding that shoe stamp periods "are not set on a yearly quota basis."

"The policy," OPA said, "has been to make each period as short as the available supply in inventories and new production warrants. The period in this case will be shortened if shoe production should exceed present estimates."

Steinhardt Here From Turkey Post

By the Associated Press

Laurence A. Steinhardt, American Ambassador to Turkey, returned to Washington yesterday for a series of conferences viewed as especially significant in view of military and political developments in the Balkan and eastern Mediterranean areas.

He reported to Secretary of State Hull, and is expected to confer with other high officials. His assignment in Turkey has been of particular importance in view of that neutral country's position close to Soviet Russia, the German-dominated Balkans, and the Allied positions in the Near East.

Any one of the four freedoms is worth much more than you can pay!

What are we fighting for? What have we given up? And what sacrifices should we be prepared and eager to make?

These are questions that clamor for the attention of every thoughtful man and woman. Exactly what are we fighting for? "Freedom of Speech" is easy to say—and easy to take for granted. But consider the significance of these words. "Freedom of Worship"—"Freedom from Want"—"Freedom from Fear"—freedom to live the American way. Without freedom, nothing could be important. Without freedom our positions or businesses or professions or industries; our savings or investments; our ambitions, hopes and plans—all would be worthless. Without freedom, our lives and the lives of future generations would be appalling.

Is any price too great? Is it too much to even exhaust our personal resources so that freedom may flourish? Is it not remarkable that we live in a land where we're only asked to lend, not pay, for freedom? Should it be necessary for our Treasury to appeal to us to invest in War Bonds—and freedom?

Wanted by Fleischmann!
Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!

TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

● This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey . . . who can appreciate a whiskey that is as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands—and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll always be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ¾ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream—to ½ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED BLENDED WHISKEY

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED Blended Whiskey. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old; 35% straight whiskies, 65% neutral spirits distilled from grain. 90 Proof.

Legion Indorses Postwar League

By the Associated Press

Omaha, Sept. 23.—The American Legion indorsed today participation by the United States in an association "of free and sovereign nations" in the postwar world, and at the same time threw its support behind Administration war-manpower policies, which include drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers.

The indorsements were contained in committee reports accepted at the closing session of the 25th annual convention, at which Warren Atherton, 51, Stockton, Calif., attorney, was elected national commander. He succeeds Roane Waring, of Memphis, Tenn.

The convention, on its last day, heard Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, declare that shattering blows against the enemy "with all the weapons that can be brought to bear, synchronized and coordinated with overwhelming assault" constitute the aim of the Navy.

He said that attacks recently carried out with great damage upon Japanese positions on the Marcus and Gilbert Islands in the South Pacific are only the shape of things to come." The admiral emphasized the importance of the Navy's swiftly growing air arm now striking hard at enemy bases, particularly in the Pacific.

Mrs. Lawrence F. Smith, Racine, Wis., the wife of the representative of the First Wisconsin District in Congress, was elected president of the Legion Auxiliary.

Mrs. Smith, whose son is serving with the United States Army in the Southwest Pacific, has been national rehabilitation chairman of the auxiliary.

Participation with other nations in a postwar association was recommended in a report by the Legion's Foreign Relations Committee, and adopted by the convention in a voice vote.

The report emphasized that such a move is the method by which "our Nation can best serve and protect its natural interests," and added that such cooperation should be "implemented by whatever force may be necessary" to maintain peace.

Support of present draft policies was contained in a report presented by the National Defense Committee, which declared that Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, has stated that 7,700,000 men are needed by December 31, 1943.

"As this figure has been based upon a definite strategic plan and worked out by experts, any authority who undertakes to change this figure, recommended as a minimum for the plan envisaged, must assume the responsibility for the effect upon the plan which may result from such change," the report said.

The Foreign Relations Committee report said "it would be premature now to state with particularity how the peace shall be implemented and enforced, but it must be obvious now to all the world that no peace can be lasting and secure for nations that are not fully prepared to maintain peace."

Admiral King told the delegates: "The Navy's strategy and tactics have always revolved around those weapon-bearers which can hit the farthest and the hardest. In this present war these bearers are aircraft. This is thoroughly understood by all naval officers. Airmindedness in the Navy is by no means the exclusive property of the Navy aviator."

But he laid great stress on the importance of close coordination of all branches in any engagement, asserting.

"Unity and team work is the basis of the Navy's fighting doctrine. It is the Navy's aim to strike the enemy at any given point with all weapons that can be brought to bear, synchronized and coordinated in overwhelming assault."

Stating that "the ultimate test of a military organization is its performance in combat, its discharge of the vital and sacred duty to defend its country against the enemy," he said naval aviation particularly "has met and is meeting this test. The record of Midway, the Solomons, the U-boat war in the Atlantic, bear witness . . ."

Fish Denies Charges

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Charging that the American Legion "has inadvertently been used to carry on a political and partisan smear campaign," Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican) New York, reiterated today his denial that he had permitted his congressional frank to be used to spread un-American propaganda.

A resolution adopted by the legion at its convention in Omaha yesterday charged that Fish "with certain other isolationist members of Congress permitted use of the frank by George Sylvester Viereck, an alleged pro-German propagandist, and the America first committee to disseminate propaganda "inimical to the United States."

"Both these charges," said Fish, "are completely and totally false and I denounced them as monufactured lies years ago. Neither the America First Committee nor Mr. Viereck ever asked to use my congressional frank to send out any speeches, nor did either write or suggest any speeches for me.

"I think everybody knows that I write my own speeches and that there is not a subversive or un-American thought in any speech I ever made in Congress or elsewhere or sent out over by congressional frank."

He added that "It would be interesting to know, and I propose to find out, who originated, and the entire source of this phoney resolution."

Randolph Holds Conference On School Military Training

Representatives of the Board of Education and members of the subcommittee on education of the House District Committee met yesterday with Chairman Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, to voice their approval of legislation making military training compulsory in high schools, expected to be introduced soon by Randolph.

Mrs. Henryy Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, explained that under current laws, high school boys must take cadet training unless they are physically disabled or have a letter from parent or guardian requesting that they be excused.

"Because of that loophole," Mrs. Doyle said, "the corporation counsel tells us that military training cannot be made compulsory."

If such training is mandatory, she added, uniforms should be furnished by the Government. They cost about $20, and are paid for by the students, although there is a system for buying them second-hand.

Assistant Superintendent Robert L. Haycock, in response to a question from Representative Randolph, declared that 2486 boys participated in the program last year, slightly over one-third of the total in the white schools, and just under half of the total in Negro schools.

Randolph stated the discussion would form the basis for further study.

Guild Says WMC Is Shirking Duty

The Washington Newspaper Guild's executive committee yesterday charged the War Manpower Commission with shirking its duty under the President's 48-hour week executive order by failing to extend the work week to local papers and wire services.

Stalin Parley Delays Senate Peace Policy

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will delay reporting out any postwar peace resolution until after this Government has been able to have a conference with Premier Stalin of Russia, Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas told The Post last night.

"We will certainly not bring in any postwar resolution until after the Stalin conference," Connally said, "and not until a number of other things have happened, either." The rangy Texan said that the pending Stalin conference was not the only reason why the committee "is not going to be stampeded into any hasty postwar decision." He indicated that a number of events on the military and diplomatic fronts would control the timing of the presentation of a peace resolution to the Senate.

No Headway Made

The postwar subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee met in executive session yesterday, but Connally revealed that nothing definite had been accomplished. Members considered various resolutions and drafted some others without coming to a decision, either as to the type of resolution or the time it would be brought to the floor.

Referring to the Fulbright resolution which passed the House Tuesday by a huge majority—360 to 29—Connally said:

"It's one thing for the House to rush into action, quite another for the Senate. We can't limit debate as the House can. We will wait until events show the time is ripe to bring in such a resolution."

The chairman indicated that since the Senate is the legislative body with the constitutional authority to ratify treaties, and Senate action would be regarded so seriously abroad that an untimely resolution might have serious international repercussions.

Other informed sources were of the opinion last night that when the subcommittee brings in a resolution members were desirous of having it more specific than Fulbright's which would put Congress on record in favor of United States participation in appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and maintain peace.

Yesterday Senator Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa predicted that the Foreign Relations subcommittee of which he is a member would bring out a committee-written resolution in about a month.

Committee members, it was said yesterday, are quite aware of the rising public demand for presentation of a resolution, but feel it safer to put off the demands of the "home folks" rather than risk an international complication.

Another ticklish problem involved in consideration of postwar problems is the size of America's tax bill, some committee members argue. Any international organization will cost money, they say, and the committee must consider how much the American public, willing to spend astronomical sums in war, is going to be willing to put up in an effort to preserve peace and prevent war.

Government Girls Plan Parties

Fall and parties go together even in wartime, say Washington's girl warworkers, and the Government Girl Club plans to open the city's gayeties tonight with a dance in St. John's Parish Hall, 819 16th st. nw.

In keeping with the times, the dance will be informal and servicemen will be invited.

Jerry Kluttz, in whose Post column the Government Girl campaign to buy a plane originated, will be guest of honor. The Government Girl Club was formed after the close of the campaign.

In its first entertainment of servicemen, Meridian Hill Hotel for Government girls will hold a dance for officers on Saturday beginning at 9 p. m. in the hotel, 16th and Euclid sts. nw. No invitations will be necessary.

As for the Eight Girls to Every Man Club, they meet October 8 to plan a party and also, rumor has it, to change their name.

BACK THE ATTACK WITH WAR BONDS 3RD WAR LOAN

UNITE BEHIND THE THIRD WAR LOAN

This war is going to cost more blood and tears. It's going to cost more money too! That's the reason for the Third War Loan. To let every American willingly pay his share to keep our fighting machine going...to help bring Victory sooner.

That is why we must back the attack with more war bonds. That is why every one of us must buy that extra $100 bond in September. It's going to call for money that might have gone for other things...even things we think we need. It's going to hurt.

Tough? Well, the easiest way to get the world out of this rotten mess is for everybody to chip in...all he can...now!

And it's really so little we're asked to do. There's no finer, safer, more completely satisfactory investment in the world than a U.S. War Bond.

Johnson Confirms His Resignation

Declares Smaller War Plants Unit Is No Longer a Political Football

Chairman Robert W. Johnson of the Smaller War Plants Corp. confirmed reports of his proposed resignation yesterday at a news conference called "to keep the record straight" about the exact status of the much-criticized agency.

After distributing a formal and informal letter of resignation sent to War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson early this month, Johnson declared that the SWPC had been a "political football which we have made into a job."

Long Under Fire

SWPC has long been under fire by elements in business, Congress, and even the agency itself for allegedly doing little if anything to help the small businessman. The persistent campaign for reorganization under different leadership struck the note that Johnson was big business-minded because of his background as head of Johnson & Johnson, surgical equipment firm.

Jonhson, who resigned a commission of brigadier general early in August to devote all his time to helping small business and essential civilian activity, answered critics by disclosing that new arrangements have been made between Government procurement agencies, and a strong field force has been established to help small business immediately and directly.

"Job Is In Hand"

In an informal report, dated September 17 and released yesterday, Johnson told Nelson that "the job is in hand at this time." He also pointed out that small business generally is in a stronger position now than it has been for a quarter of a century.

In his letters of resignation, dated September 10, Johnson pointed out that his health was such that doctors advised him "to slow down at once." He added that he desired to resign effective October 1 when Congress will have had "ample time to review any questions that have developed."

To newsmen, Johnson disclosed that there has been some talk of attaching the SWPC to the Department of Commerce. He added, however, that whether the agency is absorbed by some existing Government departments or remains independent "is up to congressional convenience."

When asked how successful SWPC has been in directing contracts to small business, Johnson declared that of 250 large prime contracts for war materiel held by the Army, Navy and the Maritime Commission, 75 per cent of the dollar volume value has been subcontracted to firms of 500 or more employes, 16 per cent to firms 100 to 500 employes, and 9 per cent to firms of less than 100 employes.

He disclosed that a detailed, regular report will be issued formally to Congress Monday.

Johnson admitted that some distress remains among small businesses, and that some important opportunities to use additional facilities exist. These situations, he added, can be corrected by SWPC "with adequate support from the Administration and the services."

British Dealings With India Held Reason for Pride

Winchester, Eng., Sept. 23. (AP)—Field Marshal Viscount Wavell, viceroy-designate of India, told a Winchester audience today that Great Britain has little to be ashamed of and much of which to be proud in her dealings with India.

"We have made mistakes in India, mistakes of manners and mistakes of judgment once or twice, but very rarely blunders due to greed or fear," Wavell asserted.

"The good we have done in giving India a peace as never before, in uniting India as never before, in encouraging a national spirit, in leading India a long way down the road toward her great destiny, has been one of the finest pieces of government and administration ever accomplished in this world of difficulties and dangers. . . .

"If we can lead India a little further, through a few more troubles, we shall have set the seal on a great task and can let her direct her own footsteps. . . ."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SOON AFTER Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin of the King of England, was appointed commander of the Burma Front, he sent word to Admiral "Ernie" King, commander of the U. S. Fleet, that he would like to come to Washington to see him.

Tough Sea-dog King sent word he would be glad to see him.

Alighting from his plane, Mountbatten went straight to King's office, and after a wait, was ushered into the presence of the United States Commander of the Fleet.

"Admiral," said Lord Mountbatten with his usual gracious charm, "there is one great favor you can do for me."

Admiral King, according to friends, looked quizzical as if saying to himself, "I thought so." But Mountbatten, unabashed, continued:

"Yes, Admiral, I should like a button off your tunic. I have one from General Marshall and I want one from you. I know it will bring me good luck."

Admiral King relaxed. Lord Mountbatten got the button

Night-Owl Churchill

JUST TWO DAYS after Prime Minister Churchill left Washington, President Roosevelt grappled with the tough problem of taxes in a manner which surprised his callers.

He received Senator George of Georgia, Representative Doughton of North Carolina, Economic Stabilizer Judge Vinson and Assistant President Jimmy Byrnes in a session to draft a new tax program to be proposed as soon as the current bond drive is out of the way.

When they came in they handed the President a detailed estimate of a tax plan. It was rather complicated. He looked it over rapidly, grasped the fundamentals immediately. Most men would have required very careful study to have taken in the new proposed tax picture, but the President got it in about two minutes, meanwhile keeping up a running fire of cheerful chatter.

He looked much refreshed, explained to his callers that he was feeling better since the departure of the Prime Minister.

"Now I can get some sleep," the President laughed.

Every night about the time he was ready for bed, FDR explained, the British Prime Minister was just getting going. Then, after a few hours sleep, Churchill was up in the morning at about 10 or 11 and would nail the President at his bedroom door just as he was about to go over to the Executive Offices.

Usually the President transacts business in his bedroom or the Lincoln Study in the morning, getting to the Executive Offices at about 10:30 for his round of appointments.

But with the Prime Minister nailing him at his door, the President explained good-naturedly, all his appointments for the day got snarled up. Then in the afternoon, Mr. Churchill took a good long nap, and was fresh and bright for another session at night.

Capital Chaff

A SENATE Military Affairs Subcommittee contends that there are critical war shipping delays, with cargo ships bound for England, Italy and the South Pacific held up because of improper loading . . . Administration friends have sounded out forthright Colorado Publisher Walter Walker of Grand Junction about running for U. S. Senator against Republican Senator Milliken next year, but he couldn't be persuaded. . . . Jim Barnes, popular White House secretary, will not run again for his old Democratic seat in Congress from Illinois. When a friend pointed out that he only lost by a couple of hundred votes last time and that the President could pull him through in 1944, Jim replied: "Nobody could pull us through in southern Illinois." . . . Recommended reading for the State Department: "What to Do With Italy," the new book by Gaetano Salvemini . . . Vice President Wallace says that "the social revolution is on the way and the Devil and all his angels can't stop it." Tray-Pushing Senators

TO MEET the manpower shortage, Senators are pushing their own trays in the Senate Office Building restaurant. During the recess of Congress, the room was converted to a cafeteria, with a lot of fancy new equipment.

One of the first tray-pushers was Senator McNary of Oregon, and close at his heels was Mrs. Caraway of Arkansas, followed by Senators Aiken of Vermont, and Maybank of South Carolina.

They found they could get a cup of coffee for five cents, three doughnuts for a dime, hot cereal and milk for 15 cents, and buttered toast for seven cents.

But they found no orange juice. Why?—the OPA. Restaurant Manager D. W. Darling hastened to explain that he couldn't sell orange juice under OPA ceiling prices without losing money. The ceiling was set on the basis of April prices, when the restaurant was selling orange juice at 10 cents (small glass) and 15 cents (large).

Meanwhile, oranges have gone up from $4.25 a crate to $7.50.

"I just can't do it," says Darling. So the tray-pushing Senators go without their orange juice.

King Receives Knox

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—U. S. Navy Secretary Frank Knox was received at Buckingham Palace by King George VI today. Another palace caller was Prime Minister Churchill, who stayed for lunch.

Military Upheld in Plant Tiff

By the Associated Press

A controversy over whether military discipline should supersede seniority privileges in the case of war plant guards is expected to be resolved by the War Labor Board in favor of the military.

A WLB panel, it was learned yesterday, has agreed on a recommended order which would permit the guards to maintain their union membership and negotiate a contract, although separate from the contract for the main bargaining unit at the plant.

Nothing in the contract, however, could interfere with military discipline.

The issue arose in the case of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., Johnsville, Pa., where a strike occurred last month in protest against the Coast Guard's arrest of several plant guards who had refused to take posts assigned them by a naval officer. The guards insisted on their seniority privileges of choosing desirable posts. Some months earlier they had been sworn into the Coast Guard, but they received no military training, continued to wear their company uniforms, were paid by the company, and were members of the CIO United Auto Workers.

The panel recommendation is subject to review by the full board, but approval is expected.

The American scientist is fighting. He is fighting the German and Japanese scientists. Not with guns—but with the best scientific brains in the world. In this fight, America's scientists have two priceless advantages: the initiative and clear vision that come from freedom of thought and action, and the matchless resources of America's 2264 industrial research laboratories.

192,000 employees of the General Electric Company are on their jobs producing war goods and buying over a million dollars of War Bonds every week to hasten victory.

"HOUSE OF MAGIC"

When you are trying to smash an atom, your aim may be as high and wide as the universe. When you are trying to smash a Nazi or a Jap, you must lower your sights. That's one of the ways that war has affected the General Electric Research Laboratory—often called the "House of Magic."

More than 40 years ago the General Electric Company mobilized a little group of men—men whose successes have made them today veteran shock troops on the battlefronts of science. Their life was to be one long campaign—scouting and reconnaissance, blitz attacks, prolonged sieges. Their objective was to lay open the secrets of the then little-known world of electricity in order to make electric light and electric power more useful to all men.

They met some defeats, but won many glorious victories. Some of their campaigns were quickly over and easily won. Others were so long and on so large a scale that only a big company and a big laboratory could have undertaken them at all. But many of the developments that came out of this laboratory as a result of this new teamwork between groups of scientists—such as the radio power tube, the Coolidge X-ray tube, the MAZDA lamp—were so far-reaching that they have helped shape the course of American life and industry.

When war clouds began to threaten, among the first of General Electric's resources to be converted to the defense effort was the priceless experience of these research scientists. Today they are working almost exclusively on war projects—many too vital and confidential even to be mentioned. No jobs today are more important; no one knows from what laboratory will come the discovery or weapon most effective in speeding victory.

When that victory is won, the sights of research will quickly be raised again and focused on the goals of peace—the further conquests of nature's secrets for the good of mankind, which is the normal aim of the scientists of the "House of Magic." General Electric Company, Schenectady, N.Y.

SUBMARINE DETECTION. In World War I, G-E scientists helped develop an effective submarine detector. Today they are again working toward victory over the Nazi wolf packs.

TURBOSUPERCHARGER. Typical of less spectacular assignments is the research on metals that has contributed to the success of the turbosupercharger—the device which enables our planes to fly at amazing altitudes.

With Mary Harris

SINGING WRITERS are Owen and Parker, now blitzing all comers twice a night at Paul Young's. Not only are they the creators of all those gaudy ballads about Cleopatra and New England genealogy—in their spare moments they dash off stage material. Some of the biting satire used by Arthur Blake at the Capitol Theater was authored by Owen and Parker. Their newest opuses, not previously heard in Washington, include an eerie what-is-it called "Burps in the Night" and a ballad about a certain Miss Taylor who does very well in a trailer.

Free Food! Vittles Gratis! The justly celebrated Hot Shoppes that flourish all around, will give free dinners (choice of the menu) to all next Monday's customers who buy a bond from their waitresses.

SHINING NEW FACES. Tommy Johnson, whose wise-cracking piano has added so many laughs to melodramas in the Willard Roof Music Hall, has joined Roy Comfort's cocktail hour trio at the Lounge Riviera . . . Bob D'Arcy, who has a way with a violin, has joined Novachordist Sid Willoughby at Burt's Trans-Lux . . . Bill Moncure, star baritone saxist, has joined Myles Hallett's Band in Cafe Caprice. He was at the Carlton last season with Jose Morand.

IT'S A WRONG RUMOR about Carmen Cavallero having changed to swing style. It started because he took the fiddles out of his band last year. That didn't work. His present 15-piece band at the Statler has 3 violins, combines sweetness and mustard hotness likes the sweet 'n' sour sauce at Ruby Foo's.

A man-about-the-globe is Hal Yates, now at Olmstead's Club. He's sung his devilish ditties to kings and queens all over the earth—and probably contributed, you'd think, to the downfall of royalty.

TREASURE ISLAND'S "Anniversary Week" is booming along like a fire in a paint store. There's dance music in the air from afternoon cocktail time until closing. Mario Hurtados takes care of the rumbas and such, Rocco Terrone's band plays bubbly Broadway rhythm while Randy Ryan, new singing guitarist, makes the girls forget Sinatra. It's all been so hectic that Owner Peter Arban's going on a hunting trip down in Georgia. He figures that even being chased by a bear would be peaceful after "Anniversary Week."

MARY KEEFE,
who's giving a shamrock touch to the Latin atmosphere of Milt Barrett's La Conga.

MISSES' DEPARTMENT. Vicki Vickee, El Patio's young swing prima donna, has a double personality. From the front she looks like Loretta Young and from the back her flaring coiffure leads you to believe she's La Helen Hamilton of the Troika. . . . Una Belle Howard, the lovely captain of the chorus at the Lotus, is also a twin of Loretta Young's in looks. . . . There may be girls in town who have prettier shoulders than Singer Jean Lee of the Dubonnet Room. But we don't know where they are. . . . Hats off to Kay Arden of the Neptune Room for the grand chore she's done in leading Henry Daye's Knights while he's been in the hospital.

A SHOW PEOPLE'S HEADQUARTERS is Restaurant "400." Because of Massa Joe Moss who knows everybody in the theater. At a recent midnight Joe greeted Cross and Dunn, the Calgary Brothers and dancers Enrico and Novella all within an hour.

Nursery Class To Open Oct. 8

Further staffing of local public nurseries is necessary if they are to operate at full capacity, and training courses for volunteers will again be held by American Women's Voluntary Services beginning October 8.

Courses will last 10 weeks and include lectures, discussions, observation trips and 50 hours of practice teaching under supervision. School methods, child psychology, nutrition, and child health will be covered.

Volunteers who take the courses must promise two half days' service a week at one of the public nurseries. They must be between 20 and 50 years of age and temperamentally fitted to handle children.

Applicants for training should call the Civilian Defense Office, Ex. 5440, which will register them and arrange interviews at AWVS headquarters, 1520 22d st. nw.

Nurseries for white children are located at 314 D st. sw., 9th and Ingraham sts. nw., 28th and M sts. nw., and 20th and Franklin sts. ne. An Anacostia site also is to be chosen.

For Negro childre there are nurseries at 44th st. and Washington pl. ne., 13th and V sts. nw., 1st and P sts. nw., 24th st. and Benning rd. nw., and Half and N sts. sw.

Nazis Scuttle Ships, Prepare To Flee Naples

land, making it difficult for the enemy to evacuate material or personnel by sea or by air."

German air power over the entire Mediterranean appeared to have collapsed. The Allies battered German ships leaving Corsica, roamed freely over southern Italy to crash high explosives among the fleeing foe, and bombed objectives in Greece, Rhodes and Crete without molestation.

Almost no Nazi aircraft were reported anywhere along the 1500-mile Mediterranean front, and huge Allied ship convoys moved at will. Two Allied planes were lost in all and they found only a single German to shoot down.

Most of the Allied land gains in Italy were north of Taranto and above the instep of the Italian boot as the reinforced British Eighth Army and British Fifth Corps pushed forward on the heels of Germans retreating northward toward the cluster of major air fields around Foggia.

Ginosa is 25 miles northwest of Taranto and 14 miles inland from its gulf. Avigliano is 50 miles east of Salerno and 8 miles northwest of Potenza. Acerno is 18 miles east and slightly north of Salerno.

Thus the continuous Allied line from Salerno on the Mediterranean to above Bari on the Adriatic had been pushed forward 8 miles northSala Consilina and 10 miles west of west of Pontenza, 14 miles north of Mottala, which is north of Taranto.

Small gains were made north of Salerno in the last mountain barrier to the plains of Naples. There the Germans resisted stubbornly while they destroyed everything of value in the once-beautiful city of 925,000. A smoke blanket hung over Naples and approaching Allied troops could hear frequent explosions.

Aerial photographs showed the destruction of the Naples waterfront to be worse than were the German demolitions at Tripoli in North Africa.

"At least 30 Italian ships have been scuttled and sunk and practically every usable berth along the docks have been blocked" by Nazi demolitions, an official announcement said.

"Fires have been burning along the docks for several days, apparently the result of demolitions. Charges have been seen to explode among the docks."

The somber pictures also showed that the industrial area north of the docks had been wrecked. Railroad yards were demolished.

"The extent to which this is going on indicates the enemy is determined to make the big port—one of the largest and best of peacetime harbors—completely useless to Allied troops when they occupy it,' 'the Allied Air Forces stated.

The Port of Naples is the principal prize. Its possession will greatly facilitate Allied logistics. A great harbor close to the forward battlelines would simplify the problems of supply and reinforcement, allowing the largest transports and cargo carriers to unload at docks rather than have to ferry their loads to beaches in lighters and landing craft. Experience in North Africa showed that the most thorough demolition failed to permanently knock out harbors. The thoroughness of the wrecking at Naples, however, quite likely will delay bringing the harbor into effective use.

General Eisenhower's communique said "both the Fifth and Eighth Armies continued to advance," and added:

"The enemy continues to cling hard to his positions in the western sector while tending to withdraw his left flank."

No heavy fighting was reported in Italy, where both sides were regrouping and building up strength for the next critical battle, expected shortly.

The Germans used a small number of tanks to cover their retreat upon the Italian boot, but the Allies had little trouble dealing with them. Considerable minefields were encountered in some sectors, but they did not approach the profusion of mines strewn in Tunisia or Sicily.

The increasingly violent air war had been heralded by the transfer of bomber groups from England. Liberators hacked at German air strength by bombing the airdromes of Maritza in Rhodes and Elevsis near Athens without opposition. Only a small number of planes were seen on the ground at these once thickly populated air bases.

War Sidelights

Nazi Press Turns Guns On Umberto

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Berlin radio said today that Crown Prince Umberto of Italy had contacted the German government for support of his ascension to the throne "after King Vittorio Emmanuele's abdication" and added that the Nazi reply "was absolutely negative."

The broadcast said, "it is certainly no coincidence that Crown Prince Umberto is now being made the object of the severest German press attacks while formerly the attacks were made chiefly on King Vittorio Emmanuele and Marshal Pietro Badoglio."

School Term Delayed

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—A Berlin propaganda broadcast said today that the beginning of a new school term in France has been postponed until the end of October by the French education ministry "as a result of Anglo-American air attacks on the French civilian population."

Alaskan Route Opened

Dawson Creek, British Columbia, Sept. 23 (AP).—U. S. Army trucks opened today what is described as the longest stage mail route in the world—the 1000-mile overland route from Dawson Creek to Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, along the Alaska highway. The 72-hour trip includes two mountain ranges.

Mt. Rainier Aerial Gunner Reported Missing in Action

Staff Sergt. Jack H. Loveless, 22, foster son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Spradlin, 3716 35th st. ne., Mt. Rainier, Md., as missing in action over Europe, according to a War Department announcement.

LOVELESS

A gunner on the Flying Fortress "Dear Mom," Sergeant Loveless had been decorated with the Air Medal and the Oak Cluster for participating in successful bombing missions over German territory.

Although "Dear Mom" was named by the commanding officer in honor of his mother, Sergeant Loveless wrote that each member of the crew was certain that the Fortress was named for his own mother.

Sergeant Loveless was born in Laurel, Md., and attended the Laurel High School. He was employed by the Stone Straw Corporation before entering the Army a year ago. Last April he was sent overseas.

Mine Pay Rise Up Before WLB

wage increases if the board approves it.

He contended that the plan would force some high-cost coal mines out of business, thus hurting production. Earlier, Campbell expressed the opinion that mine operators would use their ingenuity to reduce travel time, increasing working time.

If approved, the Illinois agreement would undoubtedly become a model for the entire coal industry, according to informed industry sources.

Previous "portal to portal" pay proposals advanced by Lewis were rejected by WLB as containing "hidden" wage increases because they provided each miner with a flat payment for travel time, regardless of the amount of time an individual actually spent traveling in the mine.

Time-and-a-half overtime would be paid to underground workers after 40 hours a week, in accordance with the Fair Labor Standards Act, instead of after 35 hours a week as provided in UMW agreements since 1935 when the seven-hour day was secured.

About 25 cents a day in minor concessions previously ordered by WLB were continued in effect, making the union's total gains under the agreement $2 a day—the amount of Lewis' original demand for a straight time wage increase.

Outside workers who have no travel time—about 10 to 15 per cent of the total number employed in Illinois—will continue to be paid time and a half after seven hours a day, but will work eight hours a day, for a $1.29 a day increase in "take home" wages.

Assuming a 6-day, 51-hour total work week, the miner's basic weekly "take home" wage (with 25 cents a day allowed for WLB concessions) would rise from $47 to $58. The rate for five days would rise similarly from $36.25 to $45, and the daily rate would jump from $7.25 to $9.

A compromise retroactive payment of $40 a man was also provided—to cover the period from April 1 to June 20 when the miners' ended the second general coal strike.

About 25,000 miners are affected by the agreement—approximately 10 per cent of the country's coal production.

Campbell expressed the opinion that the agreement would increase coal production 7 to 12 per cent due to the increased working time; with additional increases to be expected because of improved worker morale.

A UMW spokesman stated that the contract complied with every directive issued by the WLB in the coal case. He expressed the opinion that the increased money would help solve the industry's manpower troubles, thus increasing production.

Father Draft Order Unshaken as Hearings Are Concluded on Wheeler Bill

in October, but that this number would double in November and redouble in December, in spreading the 446,000 full father quota over the next three months.

Many fathers will be "processed" who never will be inducted. War manpower officials estimated yesterday that so many fathers will be deferred for occupational, physical and other reasons, that the number of fathers available for service after January 1 may not be greatly in excess of the 446,000 called before that date.

The Wheeler bill to flatly block draft of fathers until January was steadily losing strength, and under present plans will not even be called up for debate in the Senate until Tuesday, two days before father inductions begin.

Letters to Wheeler from some labor organizations and individuals, turned over to Baruch after they were read to the committee, charged among other things:

That many single men are given deferments while married men are drafted, and that frequently fathers can't get war jobs because exempt single men hold them.

That in two plants, sons and relatives of employers have been given exempt jobs, and are "walking around with pads and pencils," or have been promoted to foremen, to evade the draft.

That draft boards have no alternative but to exempt men when corporations apply for deferment on Form 42-a.

That physically fit soldiers are assigned to kitchen police, orderly tasks, truck driving and home guard duty, when they are trained and anxious for combat service overseas.

That men hide in some plants because they do not want to be observed without anything to do.

Baruch said he "doubted" that men are automatically exempted when corporations ask it. He said it was "amazing, if true," when Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, said fathers could not get jobs held by single men in some ammunition plants not requiring extensive training. He told Wheeler he should "check" and get the names of relatives of employers allegedly given exempt jobs.

But he told the committee he thought "all of this prodding is a good thing—nobody has been a greater critic than I have."

Wheeler told Baruch he was in agreement with Marshall on the size of the Army, that he was contending solely for better utilization of manpower to avert the fathers' draft. "I believe you're in a position to do something about it and prevent this precipitous action," the Montanan added.

"Before we get through we are going to have to take everybody," reiterated Baruch.

"If we do," replied Wheeler, "we'll have a Fascist state."

"Well, let's beat the fellow outside, and tackle the fellow inside later," said Baruch.

Chairman May of the House Military Committee told Baruch there are 197,656 childless men in the Government's civilian service, and 93,333 of these were bachelors. "What do you think about getting some of these single boys out of there?" asked May. "I'm with you on that," said Baruch. "I don't know why it hasn't been done already."

Following Baruch before the committee, George P. McNear, president of the Toledo, Peoria and Western Railroad taken over in March, 1942, by the Government, charged that one million workers are now wastefully employed throughout all industry because of "featherbed practices."

McNear charged his own plant was seized "because we refused to adopt wasteful labor practices in time of war," and that in taking over the road "the Government boosted personnel by more than 30 per cent, through adoption of so-called featherbed rules."

Bridge Tourney Will Open Tonight At Wardman Hotel

Fifth annual bridge championship tournament of the Cumberland Valley will open in Washington at Wardman Park Hotel this evening at 8:30 o'clock and will continue until Sunday evening. The tournament has been moved here for duration, with a local man, William Cheeks, acting for former manager L. R. Tubbs, who is now in the Navy. Capt. Russell J. Baldwin will direct.

Opening events on the program are the women's pair championship, with Mrs. R. S. DuBois of this city, and Mrs. L. D. Johnson, Arlington, Va., defending; and a similar game for men's pair, which is being played for the first time. Both contests will end tonight in one session.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott Athey, Washington, are the defending champions in the match for mixed pairs on Saturday evening. Open pairs, the only two-session game, will be played with an elimination round on Sunday afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock with the finals that evening. Holders of the open title are Earl Byers, formerly of Baltimore but now living here, and Sergt. Edward Pierson.

The American Contract Bridge League is the sponsoring body and will award national master points to the winners, who also will receive "Victory Certificates," in lieu of the usual prizes. Money heretofore spent for trophies will be contributed to the League's War Orphans Scholarship Fund.

Oct. 25 Reported As Date Set for Marshall Shift

New York Herald-Tribune Bureau

General George C. Marshall is expected to be shifted by October 25 from his status as chief of staff of the United States Army to be overall Allied commander in personal charge of the forthcoming cross-channel invasion of Europe, it was learned yesterday on excellent authority.

His successor has not been picked as yet but it is regarded as certain that it will be a protege of General Marshall's with a further possibility that the successor is not to be invested with the full title of chief of staff but only acting chief of staff. Another device which is looked upon as probable to allay fear that a change in General Marshall's status is a demotion rather than a promotion would be to invest him with the title of General of the Armies, heretofore held only by Gen. John J. Pershing.

An accident like this would cost enough to buy a $500 War Bond. Accidents have cost Americans $6,600,000,000 since Pearl Harbor.

DON'T WASTE YOUR MONEY ON THE 7th COLUMN

At a time when every penny is needed to fight the war, America is paying a staggering sum for accidents.

Because we are careless, we must spend millions for medical and hospital care; we squander our cars and trucks and busses in needless smash-ups; we destroy priceless materials and machinery, irreplaceable factories and homes; we pay insurance premiums which could and would be cut down, if Americans would exercise greater care.

But we suffer an even more tragic loss that can never be paid in dollars . . . the loss in critically needed manpower . . . the loss in war production . . . the loss in transportation facilities . . . the loss in doctors' and nurses' time. Most of all we suffer heart-rending loss in lives and limbs.

Most of these accidents are caused by carelessness, America's 7th Column. Don't give your money to the 7th Column.

. . . LEND IT FOR VICTORY

We ask every American to respond to the Third War Loan with these two resolutions:

We will buy so many bonds, and buy them so eagerly, that we will raise those fifteen billion dollars faster than the Treasury can count them.

We will smash the 7th Column of Carelessness by living, working and driving safely, so that thousands of wasted lives and billions of wasted dollars may be saved for a country which needs them as it has never needed them before.

New Tax Bill Hearings May Start Oct. 1

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Decisions to start hearings on the new tax bill October 1, and to shift the drafting of amendments to renegotiation law over to a subcommittee, are expected to be reached by the House Ways and Means Committee today.

The committee finished yesterday two weeks of hearings on the operation of contract renegotiation, and proposals for changes in the present law.

Changes to Be Made

Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota, ranking minority member of the committee, predicted that a committee majority eventually would agree on changes in the renegotiation statute substantially along these lines:

First, to make more specific the procedure and right to appeal to the courts from renegotiation settlements made by the Government departments, and open the way to appeals on questions of fact as well as questions of law.

Second, to establish an over-all price adjustment board to coordinate the renegotiation work now in the hands of half a dozen war contracting agencies, with authority to establish uniform negotiating procedures for all the agencies.

Third, to boost from $100,000 to $500,000 the minimum contract which could be renegotiated.

Other Proposals

Fourth, arrange for compensating contractors who have suffered a loss on Government contracts where the loss resulted from delays or other causes for which the Government was responsible.

Knutson conceded that the idea of repealing the Renegotiation Act in full had now been abandoned by most members. He said, too, that it was doubtful whether agreement could be reached on proposals to exempt standard commodities from renegotiation.

The question of postwar reconversion reserves for industry, he said, is one to be handled as part of the tax problem, rather than in renegotiation amendments.

Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma is chairman of the renegotiation subcommittee, and its members are Representatives Robertson of Virginia, Mills of Arkansas, and Camp of Georgia (Democrats); and Knutson, Woodruff of Michigan, and Jenkins of Ohio (Republicans).

U. S. Agency Draft Check Is Pledged

Charges before a House committee yesterday that 300,000 draftage non-fathers are in Federal service, although the Government has requested deferments for less than half that number, prompted congressional demand yesterday for investigation before fathers are drafted.

Representative Harness (Republican) of Indiana, a member of the subcommittee of the House Military Affairs Subcommittee investigating draft deferments, said after the meeting that while he was not opposed to the drafting of fahers if the armed forces need them, he believed childless men, apparently deferred "on their own hook," ought to go first.

Repeated Attacks

The Indiana Congressman, who has launched repeated attacks on draft deferments in the Federal service, declared that it was possible Selective Service would find a considerable pool of men in its inventory of back files, who should go before fathers.

Robert M. Barnett, chairman of the three-man review committee set up by the President to pass on deferments of Federal workers, told the committee he could not explain why so many non-fathers had been deferred.

Col. Edward A. Fitzpatrick, Selective Service representative on Barnett's committee, added that the Interior Department had submitted a list of 6000 key positions for which deferments were sought and took the question to the White House, without success, when the request was denied.

FSA Has 2230

Harness told reporters that the Federal Security Agency still had 1086 single men and 1144 childless married men of draft age on the rolls, a total of 2230, although very few deferments had been requested by the agency.

Harness indicated his belief that local draft boards had not been keeping their records up to date, but said that since a directive had been issued by national headquarters he had seen boards all over the country checking their files.

Chairman Costello (Democrat) of California promised that the subcommittee would make a full investigation.

58 Washington Men to Enter Fighting Services Tomorrow

Washington will send 58 more men into the Nation's armed forces tomorrow, District Selective Service headquarters reported yesterday.

The following Negroes, inducted September 4, will report to the Army:

British Official Denies 'Surrender' Of Italian Fleet

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—Viscount Cranborne, Colonial Secretary, told the House of Lords today the Italian fleet did not surrender to the Allies but "moved to designated points under the terms of the armistice."

"The future of the fleet," he added, "is under consideration."

His assertion caused surprise since previously the Admiralty, in a message to Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, Mediterranean commander in chief, said "on the occasion of the surrender of the Italian battle fleet their lordships send . . . their warmest congratulations."

Special Classes in Mechaincs Offered to Combat Labor Lack

In an effort to forestall a critical manpower shortage in the local maintenance industry, special classes for mechanical training have been instituted at Abbot Vocational School, 7th and O sts. nw., it was learned yesterday.

Although mechanics fall into the list of critical occupations, more stringent draft policies in recent weeks have brought the District Maintenance Advisory Committee to the realization of additional manpower needs here, ODT spokesmen stated yesterday when they congratulated the committee on its "excellent work" in preparing and setting up the school.

The committee, headed by W. A. Rogers, has been in operation since March and has cooperated with the Manpower Commission and the Office of Defense Transportation in the solution of local problems of the maintenance industry.

The classes at Abbot School have been made possible by the Board of Education, it was added. They are being held daily from 8 a. m. to 3 p. m. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday, night classes are held from 7 to 10 p. m. Extension of night classes will be considered as soon as added demands require it.

Collection Tomorrow

Arrangements were completed yesterday for collection of scrap paper throughout the Southwest area tomorrow, according to James E. Colliflower, chairman of the D. C. Salvage Committee which launched a city-wide pickup program last weekend.

Paper collections will continue in that area, the second to be reached in the new drive, on every fourth Saturday of the month. Members of the Southwest Police Boys' Club are delivering instructions to all Southwest homes.

Meanwhile, it was reported that the first collection, in Southeast Washington, brought in 56,546 pounds of paper.

Faces Grand Jury

Unlicensed Broker Held In Larceny

J. Burrell Parks, Negro, of 2001 11th st. nw., was held for grand jury action under $1000 bond in Municipal Court yesterday on a charge of larceny after trust in connection with accepting $600 as a down payment on a nonexistent house.

Another charge of larceny after trust for allegedly accepting $180 from another person on the fraudulent claim that it would be used to pay water rent and taxes on three houses also was placed against Parks. He was held on this charge on $500 bond by Judge Walter J. Casey.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Sylvan Schwartz described Parks as one of ten unlicensed real estate brokers in operation here. He said that many persons seeking room accommodations have been fleeced by these brokers. He said they specialize in low priced rooms and houses, down payments accepted ranging from $5 to $800.

"The situation seems to have been born of the room shortage. It is extremely difficult to apprehend the agents, but every effort will be made to eliminate their activities," the district attorney's office said.

South America Routes Asked By Eastern Air

Air routes from Washington and other major Eastern cities to South America are envisaged by Eastern Air Lines' applications, filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday.

This is the first application by any domestic air carrier for South American routes. Pan-American Airways has a network of routes throughout the Western Hemisphere.

In contrast to present routes, Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, president and general manager of Eastern, pointed out in an accompanying letter to L. Welch Pogue, CAB chairman, "our South American service is projected straight through the heart of that continent with the shortest possible mileage and the greatest speed."

Asking the board for action now, and expressing the opinion that "nothing stands in the way of a complete and immediate overhauling of our commercial air transport arrangements in and between the Americas," Captain Rickenbacker said:

"As I visited the various theaters of war, where I found our boys fighting, bleeding and dying, I realized that those of the 3,000,000 pilots, navigators, radio men and mechanics who are privileged to return, will be the leaders in our country's greatest social and economical development—aviation as an instrument of peace and culture."

Rickenbacker pointed to the necessity of "immediately broadening our conception of the potentialities of aviation" if we are to "these great resources of trained personnel and the war-stimulated productive capacity of our aircraft factories."

Besides extension of domestic routes and a route to Montreal, Canada, Eastern's applications cover flights from here to Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic; Caracas, Venezuela; Manaos, Corumba, Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Asuncion, Paraguay; Buenos Aires, Argentina; and Montevideo, Uruguay.

House Passes Bill Boosting Insurance On Housing Loans

A bill increasing by 400 million dollars the Federal Housing Authority's fund for insurance of loans for housing in war production areas was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

The measure extends the life of the insurance operations from July 1, 1944, to July 1, 1945, and increases the authorization of insurance for war housing loans from $1,200,000,000 to $1,600,000,000.

5 Offspring in Navy, Father Tries to Enlist

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 23 (AP).—A Cumberland man with four sons in the Navy and a daughter in the WAVES was turned down because of age when he attempted to join them in service, Chief Petty Officer Walter B. Warmee said today.

C. H. Williams, 53, told Warmee that he wanted to enlist "in order to help along with my sons and daughter to win the war."

Mrs. Roosevelt In California After 23,000-Mile Trip

San Francisco, Sept. 23 (AP).—Looking tired after her 23,000-mile trip to the South Pacific and Australia, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told a press conference today she was glad to be home, adding, "I don't think I ever worked as hard in my life."

She arrived from Honolulu by plane at noon, just five weeks and two days after leaving the country on the longest and hardest of her many journeys. She rested briefly at her hotel, tried in vain to find and telephone the father of a Marine corps lieutenant who dropped 3000 feet into the sea—and will recover—and then answered questions at a press conference.

The trip had three purposes, she explained: accepting a long-standing invitation from Australia and New Zealand to see the work women were doing in the war there; gathering information for the Red Cross on how it is functioning and what it needs most, and carrying out her husband's suggestion that she "see as many of the men as you can, and see how things are going with them."

'Global Political' Plan Charged By Rep. Shafer

By International News Service

Representative Paul W. Shafer (Republican) Michigan, member of the House Military Affairs Committee, declared yesterday that he has the detailed blueprint of a plan intended to transform the War Department into a "global political organization."

Shafer, who obtained unanimous consent for insertion of his remarks in the Congressional Record, said the purpose of the men behind the plan "are nothing less than treasonous."

"I do not intend to sit idly by," he said, "and permit the Hopkins-Niles-Frankfurter-Rosenman regime to turn the War Department into a global political organization."

Auto-Lite offers Industry a War Bond sales plan that really works . . .

We call it the "Auto-Lite Citation Plan." For when employees pledge to buy war bonds they receive an acknowledgment of good citizenship and loyalty to the Nation. This plan has been exceptionally productive for two sound reasons: First. It shows the employee what weapons his investment in bonds can buy for the boys in service. Second. It gives our men and women the double satisfaction of knowing some of the money they earn at war work, helps deliver fighting equipment where it, too, can best serve. You may find this plan fits your needs. Copies of these citations as we are using them at Auto-Lite and full details of the plan's operation will be mailed upon request.

Marie Nash Is Godmother To Flying Unit

Marie Nash, only American girl to be a "godmother" to an English flying outfit, the 1830th Squadron of the Royal Air Force, yesterday gave her impressions of being the spiritual guide of conservative English fighting men.

"It's not something to take lightly," said the girl with the blue eyes and honey-colored hair. "Being a godmother to such men is a responsibility that has almost become a full-time job with me, apart from my theater work."

The men of the squadron, training at Quonset, R. I., look up to her as the American symbol of girls they left behind them, but with an added "something," hard to define, she said.

"That something I detect in their letters," Miss Nash went on, "is their dependence on a woman to understand their loneliness thousands of miles from familiar scenes."

She takes her job as godmother to heart, writing the men chatty

MARIE NASH

letters, "to fill the gaps in their lives."

Each member of the squadron wears an identity bracelet given him by the singing star of "Big Time" now playing in Washington.

She believes that every woman should devote some part of her day to work on the "morale front."

"Often the only contact our fighting men have with life is in correspondence with someone to whom they can pour out their dreams and enthusiasms. They do their job better when they have a friend with pen," she said.

Not content with godmothering Squadron 1830, Miss Nash makes frequent appearances at navy yards and aboard merchant ships along the Atlantic seaboard.

Lone Gunman Gets $500 in Holdup of Financial Office

Believed by Montgomery County police to be the same man who robbed loan companies in Hagerstown and Baltimore recently, a lone gunman yesterday ordered two finance Co., 7928 Georgia av. Silver Spring, Md., in a washroom and escaped with $500.

Threatening Mrs. Agnes O'Brien, cashier, 620 Luzon ave., nw., and Mrs. Lucille Holland, 716 Boundary ave., Silver Spring, not to leave the washroom, the man took about 20 minutes to file open a drawer containing the cash.

According to the women, the man entered the store during the absence of the manager, M. J. Grossman, who was at luncheon. Suddenly he brandished a pistol.

The women said the bandit's right arm was covered in what appeared to be bandage. They said he was about 45, had light hair and wore glasses and weighed about 180 pounds.

His attire, they told police, was that of a railroad engineer's work clothes.

Elinor Glyn Dies; Wrote 'Three Weeks,' 'It'

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 23.—Elinor Glyn, who put sex appeal into parlor conversation under the name of "It," died today, but the legend of her life, which was as exciting as the plots of her novels, is still alive after half a century.

ELINOR GLYN

Mrs. Glyn would have been 79 on October 17. She had been in a nursing home three weeks. For the last two days she had been unconscious.

[Mrs. Glyn, often visited the United States, sometimes making her home in Washington, New York or Hollywood for intervals. While here in the winter of 1937-38, she bought an old Georgetown home at 3147 P st., which she remodeled.—Editor's note.]

Elinor Glyn emerged from the overstuffed Victorian era into the gay setting of Edwardian England, red-headed and green-eyed, smartly gowned, clever and witty. She knew everyone.

In 1892 she married wealthy Clayton Glyn, and on their honeymoon in Brighton he rented the public baths at the Metropole for two days in order, he said, that he might appreciate the beauty of the mermaid he had married.

They settled in a 300-year-old farmhouse in Essex near Eastion Lodge, where the aristocracy of England, including the then Prince of Wales, gathered in the nineties.

In 1900 she wrote her first novel, "The Visits of Elizabeth." Seven years later she published "Three Weeks," which was publicly denounced as immoral but which heralded the advent of jazz 10 years before its time. Twenty years after "Three Weeks" she wrote "It," also something of a shock even in the flapper era, but the title became a symbol of sex appeal.

"She wrote frankly of love when the world was squeamish," said the Evening News. She produced 31 books and 9 movies.

In later years she occupied a vast apartment in London decorated in the style of the Edwardian era.

"People are in the habit of saying my books are shocking, but they are not," she once said. "They are just love stories."

"Modern sex novels," she continued, "are disgusting, for they are physiological studies of diseased minds."

She was born in Jersey, in the Channel Islands, in 1865, the younger daughter of Douglas and Elinor (Saunders) Sutherland of Toronto, Ontario.

Back the Attack! —WITH WAR BONDS

THE MORE INVASION BONDS WE BUY... THE FEWER INVASION LIVES WE LOSE!

INVASION BARGES sweep in towards a European beach. Men swarm ashore. Tanks thunder on ahead. Fighter planes and low-flying bombers swoop in to attack . . . Our boys have done it again!

We on the home front must "do it again," too. We've gone over the top on every other War Bond drive. Most of us have subscribed 10% of our pay. But that's not enough. The 3rd War Loan, the largest financing program in the history of the world, is now on. Every one of us is asked to buy at least one extra $100 Bond during the course of this drive.

Have you bought yours?

Remember . . . your bonds help to shorten the war. Your bonds help to save the lives of American boys overseas. Our own boys! . . . the kid who used to live around the corner, the clerk who used to wait on you in the grocery store, the boy from your own house.

They're risking everything, sometimes giving everything, for us. All we're asked to do is lend our money for them. Lend it to the safest borrower in the world. Lend it . . . and get back four dollars for every three. Can we hesitate?

Let's give 'em the tools to make every invasion stick—to make every attack reach its objective. Let's buy those Bonds—today!

Delegate Bill

It was disappointing to learn that Representative Celler's subcommittee passed up the opportunity to give the District delegate bill a resounding vote of approval. All the subcommittee did was to send the bill back to the full House Judiciary Committee without recommendation. Some members said that a bill as important as this one should be thoroughly discussed by the full committee. That view is well founded, but it would also have been a great help to the full committee if the Congressmen who listened to the hearing on this bill had given it their specific blessing.

Of course, the full committee will have the advantage of direct discussion of the bill with Representative Walter, its author, who was not a member of the subcommittee. It will also have access to the printed hearings. The committee may well give special attention to this record, for it shows nearly complete unanimity among the many citizens who testified on this bill. Indeed, the community spoke almost with one voice in appealing to Congress for the privilege of electing a legislative agent such as Hawaii and Alaska have had for many years. We do not see how Congress can deny that appeal without blasting every hope of this disfranchised community for improvement of its status.

Enactment of the Walter bill would admittedly be only one step in the direction of improving the District government and facilitating the flow of local legislation through Congress. But it would be an important step because it would restore some measure of franchise here and it would give this headless community a spokesman who could interpret its needs and desires to Congress. To turn down such a modest proposal would be equivalent to a slap in the face for Washington citizens, including about 60,000 men in uniform who are fighting, or training to fight, for a democracy in which they have no voice. We have too much confidence in the fairness of the House Judiciary Committee to fear that it will follow any such course.

Baruch Vs. Wheeler

Senator Wheeler agrees with Bernard Baruch that the size of the Army should be determined by the military authorities. He assumes, however, that Army requirements could be met without impairment of the war effort, even if the drafting of fathers should be deferred to next year. The real question at issue, therefore, is whether the Wheeler bill or any similar measure would prevent the Army from getting the number of men required at the time when they are needed. Merely emphasizing the importance of giving General Marshall a free hand in carrying out his program will not silence opponents of the father draft who maintain that enough single men can be found to satisfy the Army.

In the hearings before the Senate Military Affairs Committee on Wednesday, Senator Wheeler tried to prove his point by referring to the findings of the recently issued Baruch report on manpower. He cited the existence of wasteful labor practices as evidence that many more single men could be released for military service by proper conservation of labor. Mr. Baruch, on the contrary, insisted that General Marshall should be given unqualified support. "In such a matter," he said, "it is better to be safe than sorry." That sentence sums up Mr. Baruch's position very well. He does not profess to know just what effect deferred drafting of fathers would have, but he rightly prefers to leave the final decision to those responsible for the conduct of the war.

Mr. Baruch's exposure of the bungling manpower policies that have resulted in hoarding of labor, in high turnover and inefficient utilization of labor is entirely consistent with his patent unwillingness to impose restrictions on the drafting of fathers. Indeed, the manpower report noted that mistakes of policy have cut so deeply into our reserves of skilled labor that "from now on" deferments must, in the interests of war production, be made "more on the basis of occupation than family status." Many more single men could have been released for military service had our labor force been properly mobilized months ago. As it is, they have to remain on the job if the production program is to be carried out. Hundreds of thousands of family heads who would have been transferred to essential jobs, under a carefully planned organization of the labor market, have been permitted to remain in nonessential jobs. There is no possibility of effecting lightning shifts that would transfer these fathers immediately to war jobs and free unattached warworkers for military service, although Manpower Commissioner McNutt has apparently assumed that such miracles can happen here.

Mr. Baruch can, therefore, maintain with entire consistency that the Army should be trusted to fill draft quotas as it sees fit, on the assumption that due regard will be given to the needs of industries supplying the Army and providing necessities for civilians. In effect both his testimony and his report condemn the unsound Wheeler bill. However, advocacy of a "free hand" for General Marshall is quite consistent with demands for legislation requiring the Army to draw first upon the younger fathers having the smallest number of children.

Up To The Speaker

Speaker Rayburn must now take back the hot potato which he dropped into the lap of the House Judiciary Committee several months ago. That committee has concluded that it has "no jurisdiction and no responsibility as a committee" to sit in judgment on the Cox inquisition, which is bringing the entire House of Representatives into disrepute. So the Speaker will have to find other means of escape from his blunder in appointing Radio Lawyer Cox chairman of a House committee to investigate the Federal Communications Commission.

We had hoped that the Judiciary Committee would see fit to conduct hearings on Commissioner Durr's appeal for fair play in the FCC investigation. Its prestige and reputation for impartial inquiry are such that any recommendation from the committee would have carried great weight with the House. But we can understand the reluctance of Chairman Sumners and his colleagues to sit in judgment upon another House committee without special instruction from the House. Probably there was a feeling also that the Judiciary Committee should not be casually asked to pull the Speaker's chestnuts out of the fire. In any event, the Cox case is back in the lap of the Speaker and the pertinent question is: what is he going to do about it?

There are at least two courses of action open to Mr. Rayburn. First, he could recognize the simple fact that Cox is unfit for the assignment he has been given and remove him. That might raise some question as to the Speaker's power to oust a Congressman from a select committee. But the general rule is that the power of appointment carries with it the power of dismissal. And it would certainly be easier on the reputation of the House to have the Speaker invoke this little-used power than to let a Congressman who has accepted a fat fee from a broadcasting company use congressional machinery to smear the Government agency which is regulating broadcasting.

Secondly, Mr. Rayburn could lay the Cox case, along with Commissioner Durr's petition for a fair hearing, before the House. That body would then have to decide for itself whether its reputation should be further besmirched by tolerating the type of inquisition that Radio Lawyer Cox is conducting. We cannot believe that the House would sanction such prostitution of its investigative function if the facts were fully laid before it. But in any event Speaker Rayburn could thus relieve himself of responsibility for this travesty on democratic government by ascertaining the will of the House.

Undoubtedly direct action by the Speaker is much to be preferred, for, after all, it is his mistake that is bringing contempt upon the House. The facts about Cox's connections with Station WALB were known at the time of his appointment to head the investigating committee and could have been ascertained by Mr. Rayburn. His leadership in the House will undergo a sorry wilting if he now lacks the courage to correct his blunder in the most open and direct manner.

The Senate Should Act

The Fulbright resolution, which, would pledge the United States to a positive policy of postwar international collaboration for peace, is now in the hands of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. That body has three courses open to it. It can report out the measure unchanged and thus give the Senate the opportunity of following the lead of the House, which approved Mr. Fulbright's resolution by an overwhelming vote. The Foreign Relations Committee may, on the other hand, adopt one of the dozen postwar foreign policy proposals sponsored by members of the Senate. Some of these, among them the famous Burton-Ball-Hatch-Hill resolution, go much further in the direction of committing the United States to join hands with other nations in keeping the peace than does the Fulbright resolution. Or, the committee may keep the House-approved resolution on ice, as it has thus far done with all similar proposed statements of foreign policy.

Continued inaction would, however, be inexcusable. Up to now there may have been reason for the Foreign Relations Committee and the Administration to fight shy of bringing up any resolutions on postwar policy. One such reason was that it would stir up such violent argument as to make for disunity within the Nation as well as between this Nation and its allies. But that argument no longer holds water. In view of the fact that the House has acted, the Senate can no longer refuse to act without giving rise to the suspicion that it is unwilling to do anything. The choice before it really narrows down to voting on the Fulbright resolution or voting on some substitute. Whatever it does, it can only be hoped that it will show the same measure of unanimity and good judgment that the House has shown.

End Of A Mystery

The purpose of the sudden flight from Germany to Britain of the Deputy Fuehrer Rudolph Hess is not, it seems, to become one of those fascinating historical mysteries like the whereabouts of the lost tribes of Israel, or the identity of the man in the iron mask, or the fate of the never-crowned Dauphin, Louis XVII. Mr. Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, has made public the whole story and it turns out to be what had already been disclosed unofficially—namely, that Hess was the bearer of terms upon which the then apparently victorious Hitler was willing to make peace.

From Hess' point of view the terms must have seemed so generous as to be virtually irresistible. The British Empire was to remain intact, except for the return of the former German colonies. Hitler was to have a free hand on the European continent and was to make certain demands upon Russia which would be satisfied "either by negotiation or by war." Meanwhile, Britain was to evacuate Iraq on the southern Asiatic frontier of Russia. One string, however, was attached to these conditions, namely that the British were to get rid of Winston Churchill and his government, since these were "not persons with whom Hitler would be willing to negotiate."

Today, of course, these terms seem utterly fantastic; there is not a shadow of doubt that the German high command, if not Hitler himself, would, if they could, joyfully settle at one-tenth the price that Hess proposed. And yet as compared with the conditions imposed upon France less than a year earlier, they were the height of magnanimity. Had they been disclosed at the time, they would certainly have created excitement among our isolationists who were vociferously expounding both the possibility and the desirability of negotiated peace.

Thus it is logical enough to ask why Hitler was satisfied to offer terms that both to him and to the world would have represented something less than total victory. Another revelation from London helps us to find the answer. A German plan for invasion of Britain in the autumn of 1940 had been frustrated by the RAF. Britain had survived the great blitz of 1940-41. It was already apparent to the German high command that Britain could not be easily or quickly defeated, and both the German army and the German air forces had been reorganized for short wars and sudden and decisive victories and not for another prolonged struggle such as that of 1914-18.

But mixed with this logic was an extraordinary naivete which gives us the key to the fatal blindness of the whole Nazi psychology. Hess was taking his peace terms not to the British government but to the Duke of Hamilton, evidently because he believed that gentleman's supposed connection with a group of Scottish Jacobites would make him receptive. He said that he had been assured by no less an authority than the famous Herr Professor Haushofer that it would be so. Apparently neither Hess nor Haushofer realized that it is more than 150 years since the Jacobite idea ceased to be any sort of factor in English politics, that it has survived only as a sentimental tradition, and that even those who share the tradition are no longer certain as to who, if anybody, the legitimate heir of the Stuarts might be. This Nazi variety of wishful thinking is wilder than anything of our own. It was the same kind of reasoning which led Hitler to conclude that the United States could not be a factor in the war because it was on the brink of internal revolution!

In The Dodecanese

When the Germans captured Crete and occupied the Greek islands of the Aegean, these islands together with the Italian-held Dodecanese provided the Axis with a chain of air bases from which to carry the war to the British in Egypt and Palestine as well as a barrier in the way to an Allied reconquest of Greece. That barrier is now in process of being broken.

This week an Allied force landed on the Dodecanese Islands of Leros, Castellorizzo and Kos and the Greek island of Samos. At every point the Italian garrisons proved cooperative. On the principal Dodecanese Island of Rhodes, however, the Germans were present in sufficient force to overwhelm and disarm their erstwhile allies and take possession of Rhodes themselves. How long they will be able to remain there is another matter. Allied air power will soon be able to dominate the Aegean and make it difficult for the Germans to reinforce their garrison on Rhodes. It will also be possible for the Allies to bomb the air bases on that and other German-held islands. And the same applies to Crete. In fact, there is now a strong possibility that Crete will be bypassed when the Allies get around to invading the Balkans.

BEFORE THE STORM

An hour before the storm,
I heard the rain begin
By shaking a sultry beech
Where no sound had been.

The sails of cloud appeared,
But stood far off from land.
Only the sudden wind
Struck cool against my hand.

The light leaves at a rush
Started from a drowse—
Under the voice of leaves,
I heard rain in the boughs.

Tripartite Meeting

By Mark Sullivan

Stalin's Advantage

THE STATUS of the proposed meeting of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill with Premier Stalin of Russia is this: A preliminary meeting of subordinates—members of the foreign departments of Russia and Britain and of our State Department—is more or less definitely arranged to take place at "an early date." The function of this preliminary meeting is to clear the ground and decide minor details. Thereafter, it is hoped, the meeting of Messrs. Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin will take place.

The meeting of the three heads must still be described as a "hope"—that is the word Mr. Churchill used in his speech to the House of Commons this week. But the hope has been long deferred, due to consideration for the convenience or wish of Mr. Stalin, and as a consequence so much of the attention of the world has been centered upon the proposed meeting that Mr. Churchill's hope must now be regarded as justified. Another failure of the meeting to take place would be so conspicuous as to be seriously unfortunate.

WHEN THE meeting takes place, Mr. Stalin will have one immense advantage over Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill. Mr. Stalin will be able to say what he likes—and what he says will stick. He is the supreme and practically unqualified head of the Russian government, the dictator, if you like. He makes Russian foreign policy, and no one questions him. He will not need to look over his shoulder to make sure he is supported by Russian public opinion, for whatever public opinion there is in Russia is what Mr. Stalin wishes it to be. The government of which he is head controls press and radio. Nothing is said or printed that the government does not approve. When the Russian government wants the Russian people to support a certain position or policy, they drench the country with propaganda to that effect over the radio and in the press. No one dares to go counter to it. A dissenter would be regarded as an enemy of the state and treated accordingly. No opposition party or group is permitted to exist.

In short, Mr. Stalin, as premier of Russia, when he meets with Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt, will be able to take positions and stand upon them as completely and confidently as if he were a private individual managing his own business.

On the other hand, Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill will be under the handicap that limits heads of countries in which there is a free press and a free radio. They will be obliged to guard themselves against taking a position which might be too formidably criticized at home.

This criticism has already begun in America. And the most vociferous part of it takes a strange position. It says, not that Mr. Roosevelt may yield too much to Mr. Stalin, but that he may yield too little. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and by inference President Roosevelt, are criticized, in spirit attacked, by an allegation that our State Department is "anti-Russian." Mr. Hull is obliged to denounce the charge as a "falsehood," and Mr. Roosevelt gives us the harsher word "lie."

HERE IS a strange thing. Here is criticism, harsh and bitter criticism, uttered in America about the attitude of the American Government in its dealings with a foreign government. But the criticism does not seek to strengthen the hand of the American government, it seeks to strengthen the hand of the foreign government. It seeks to intimidate the American President and Secretary of State, seeks to make them defer to the head of the foreign government.

Between Mr. Stalin and, on the other hand, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, when they meet, will be clearly defined issues. Instead of helping Mr. Roosevelt to stand firm, this American criticism seeks to weaken him. In the meeting Mr. Stalin is to have not only the support of his own country, because he is able to decree that, but also the support of a vociferous section of opinion in America. This opinion, adverse to the American Government, is permitted to be uttered in America by reason of our institution of free speech. And it is uttered in behalf of a foreign government which forbids free speech.

This condition will attract more attention as the meeting of the three heads of state approaches, which well-informed expectation says will be before the end of the year; and as policies of our Government, differing from those of Mr. Stalin, are more generally understood.

Post For Fathers

If it is necessary to draft fathers, why not make sure that they are assigned to interior posts near their children?

There are thousands of physically fit young officers and enlisted men who are holding safe jobs in quartermaster depots, service commands, reception centers and defense sectors right here in this country. Why not give fathers these posts? A VIRGINIAN,

The New Navy

By Paul Schubert

Yardstick Of Power

WE HAVE a new Navy.

Most of us have been so busy working for the past couple of years, trying to get the "war effort" rolling as it should roll, that we haven't had time for much sense of accomplishment. On the contrary, we feel perpetually that we aren't doing quite enough—that we should get ahead faster if things would only "go right." We can't help being anxious over the feeling that the manpower problem ought to be tackled more determinedly if the national energies are to be fully harnessed. We get the megrims over the kicking around taken by gasoline rationing—and we wonder if our rooms are not going to be chillier this winter than they need have been.

It isn't reassuring to see the "size of the Army" debate being reopened. We thought Pearl Harbor had cured us forever of any tendency to pull our punches.

Then, one morning, we open the newspaper and discover that we have a new Navy.

We HAVE been getting something in return for all this national effort. We have been transforming ourselves from a "potential" world power, into a very real world power—perhaps the world power.

We had a large Navy when we went to war in 1941. It was the best equipped of all our fighting services, and the readiest for war. But as compared to our present establishment, it was a second-rate fleet. Today's naval establishment floats 14,000 ships. More than 600 of them are men-of-war, of a total tonnage of 2,250,000 tons. This floating Navy has an air component of 18,000 planes. The entire establishment is a Navy at war—fighting in the Atlantic, the Mediterranean, the North and South Pacific—fighting in the air from the Arctic Circle to the islands of the South Seas.

They said, four or five years ago, that navies were dead. They said they were only good for "coast defense"—and that could be better done by aircraft. They called the Navy the "first line of defense" . . . they had forgotten that wars are won by taking the offensive . . . they didn't believe the United States would ever voluntarily mount an offensive against another power . . . they didn't think we should ever fight overseas again. They didn't realize that such things as Pearl Harbor could happen in a decent world—that "diplomats" like Ribbentrop and Kurusu could go on "peace" missions intended to further wars.

THEY SAID harsh things about the battleship—called it "obsolete" . . . used the term "battleship admiral" as a term of derision. They were thinking, of course, about battleships designed in 1912, commissioned along about 1916—the ships that were a hobble upon our battle line's striking power, thanks to the Washington Conference of 1922 which was supposed to work "against" Japan.

They didn't realize what new honor would come to the term "line-of-battle ship" when it was applied to the new North Carolinas and Iowas and to others turned out under pressure of critical national emergency and sent to sea in secrecy—to proclaim their presence to our enemies with blazing batteries.

They inferred that there was an inherent conflict between navies and "aviation" . . . they didn't realize that aviation is as inseparable from modern navies as are guns and engines——

For a Navy like our new Navy is a product of the machine age.

Our national strength is the strength of machines built by men and wielded by men. Give a man a machine and he becomes 5 men, 10 men, a 100 men.

By building this Navy, we have in effect increased our population tenfold, as measured in effective fighting power.

And this Navy is only one of the warmaking machines that we have been creating during these years of struggle.

Our national existence was threatened. We faced the possible loss of our land, our treasure, our liberty. We came to the realization that we were not a great power—we were merely a potential power. People like the Japanese and the Germans and the Italians dared to treat us with contempt—to assault us, to declare war on us——

In the crisis, we set out to make ourselves worthy of bearing the name "power."

We have become, in all truth, a world power.

Now it is up to us to act like one.

Work Or Fight

It has been said that American soldiers know what they are fighting against, but not what they are fighting for. To a certain extent this is true, but we do know some of the things we are fighting for.

If I ever meet the enemy, I will want to know that I am risking my life to defend the sacred privileges granted to us Americans by our Constitution. I will want to be certain that when I return from battle I will be able to worship as I please and that I may make my living according to my own choosing.

Now, before I have ever faced the enemy, I am distressed to learn that one of these privileges has been violated by the Legislature of the State of Maryland. The members of this Legislature have passed a bill that revokes an American's right to select his own occupation, without having fully considered its consequences.

Undoubtedly, the lawmakers of Maryland believe that they have done a very patriotic thing, but they have destroyed one of the things that a soldier believes in with highest esteem. I understand the manpower problems facing industry, but I am certain that they can be overcome without the use of such drastic legislation.

I wish to commend you for your strong arguments against the "Work or Fight" law. At the age of 18, I know what I am fighting for.

Back The Attack

I have just read that the "Back the Attack' show now on display at the Monument Grounds will not be sent "on the road" after the current exhibition here, and am writing to add my voice to what must be a chorus of pleas for reconsideration of such a decision. I am neither a militaristic American nor one who believes in excesses of patriotic display, having felt until a few years ago that almost all patriotic manifestations were, to use the current slang, "corny."

Nevertheless, I have almost never felt so proud of being an American and of the privilege of being able to contribute to the upkeep of our armed forces as after seeing the "Back the Attack" show last Sunday and again this evening. Even to one so unmechanically minded the impression of such a mass and variety of equipment suited to all conditions and types of terrain and weather could not fail to be very powerful.

Should it be argued that transportation difficulties stand in the way, I should reply that it would be worth canceling all the Hollywood star tours, however much one enjoys the parades and sales appearances, if it would enable this Army Show to reach a few of our larger cities.

APPRECIATIVE.

FEPC Hearings

You stated editorially with some justice September 17 that the hearings by the Fair Employment Practices Committee into discriminatory employment practices by the country's railroads were "ritualistic" and that the evidence of discrimination against Negroes "is apparent to the naked eye."

I agree wholeheartedly with you when you decry "the obvious violence done to democratic principles by the current practices of the railroad industry" and I want to underscore your statement pointing up the "urgent practical need at this time for wider utilization of Negro skills."

But while the railroads' discrimination is "apparent to the naked eye," what is also equally evident is the beam in your own eye when you charge that "the labor organizations (are) primarily responsible for the discrimination."

Here is a hearing called by a Government agency for the single purpose of discovering how the present anti-Negro policy came about and what the present situation is on the Nation's railroads, and what happens? Without waiting to hear one scintilla of evidence and without even the pretense of an investigation by The Post, you have determined who is guilty and you have brought in a verdict: "The Government's power should be used to break their (rail brotherhoods) monopolistic control."

If the Post had had a reporter covering the initial hearings, as many other papers did, it would have learned that spokesmen for 22 of the Nation's leading railroads charged by the FEPC with discrimination argued only that their employment policies reflect the civilization in which they operate, reflect as they said, "the prevailing mores and legal system of the States they serve."

At no time did they even so much as hint that the unions were "primarily responsible" for the discrimination.

The Government's power should be used against the real culprits, of course. COMMON SENSE.
Washington, Sept. 17.

Superman Supremacy

After this war is over, there is only one way to deal with the arrogant and belligerent Germans, who have started three major wars and one minor one in the past 90 years, and who will undoubtedly again attempt their "Superman Supremacy" 25 years from now. With the advent of victory for the United Nations (God willing), Germany should be partitioned off to about half the present size, slices going to France, Belgium, Poland, Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Then and only then would we see world peace. C. R. G.

The Once Over

Mr. Twitchell Views With Alarm

Paul R. Burkholder, associate professor of plant psychology at Yale, predicts that we will be eating "vegetable steaks" and drinking "soybean milk shakes" in the near future. The professor says this will come about with the conquering of "ignorance concerning nutrition values, the elements of an adequate diet, and Vitamin B content."

Elmer Twitchell threw down his paper and made a wry face. Somebody's always lowering my morale," he sighed. "The very thought of a vegetable steak is terrible. It'll be pretty awful if all we get out of this world war is a tenderloin of artichoke!"

As for milk shakes, Elmer admitted the ones he has been getting lately tasted pretty funny and the drug-store clerk might be using soybeans in them right now.

"I want a Federal Commission for the Control of the Soybean," he declared with feeling. "They're letting it run wild. And I'm for less talk about vitamins and less scientific exploration into what's in vegetables today that nobody suspected was there yesterday.

"Oh, for the days when a man sat down at the table and simply ate what was put before him without any thought of vitamins, proteins and all that! The good old times when all he had to decide was if the vittles tasted good!

"I used to enjoy my meals. I was a good feeder up to about 10 years ago. I thought a soybean was a Chinese bran. Proteins were never mentioned in my set. For all I knew of them, vitamins were something in geometry. Then I began to hear a lot of talk about nutrition values with warnings about what certain things in a square meal could do to me. I began to get nervous about eating at all.

"But I managed to get along pretty well for a while although eating ceased to be the fun it had been all my life. Then came the glorification of the various vitamins, with every radio program yelling about 'em. The vitamin ballyhoo went so far that about four years ago I found I couldn't look a dinner plate in the face without misgivings.

"If the hostess said 'Won't you have some more lamb stew, Mr. Twitchell?' I couldn't say 'Yes, thanks,' like I used to. I had to stop and think it over, wondering if Yale had gone into the matter of lamb stews and turned in a verdict.

"It was the same way with everything. I grew cautious about liver and onions, furtive with regard to a New England boiled dinner and very apprehensive about that old standby, ham and eggs."

Elmer was weeping. "It's just too bad," he sobbed, "why can't they do something about Yale professors, chemists in general and the soybean and vitamins A, B and C in particular?"

Human Bomb

I happened to be reading The Post and chanced to run across the article written by Tech. Sgt. Jim Lucan describing the Human Bomb operation performed by Lieut. Comdr. J. B. Griffith and Lieut. W. C. Wycoff "somewhere in the South Pacific." No doubt there are many people who tend to regard this article as being somewhat exaggerated, but I for one know that it happened to be true.

Having received burns covering my entire face and arms and parts of my legs while serving aboard the U. S. S. San Francisco, I was transferred to —— for hospitalization. I happened to be placed in the same ward with Allen Gordon, "The Human Bomb." Even though my left hand is now almost useless, I can say that thanks to Dr. Wycoff's knowledge of medical science I am now living "on borrowed time" as is Gordon.

I saw the 20-mm. shell which was extracted from Gordon's hip and having gone through hell myself, I know he must have suffered a great deal. Regardless of his pain, however, he always managed to smile and agreed with me that "no matter what setbacks or hardships you may be called upon to meet, be it in regard to health, finances, or other matters, keep your chin up, give with a grin, and thank God that it wasn't any worse."

Food Draft Is Revised

43 Nations Asked To Sign Here

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night announced that representatives of 43 governments have been invited to meet in Washington early in November to sign the revised draft of an agreement establishing the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

The new draft, overhauled to give smaller nations more power than was indicated in a first proposal growing out of the Hot Springs food conference in June, was simultaneously released.

Meantime, it was revealed that this country is ready to push a program calling for increased efforts at development of foreign agricultural resources to help meet postwar needs. While the program will be global in perspective, it will center first on food increases that can be obtained in Latin America and North Africa—where manpower is comparatively plentiful.

Prepared by the Office of War Mobilization, the executive order transferring authority over the foreign food expansion plan to the Office of Economic Warfare is expected to be signed by the President within the next few days.

The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration—the first postwar international organization growing out of this war—will be governed mainly by a central committee made up of representatives of China, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom and the United States.

This committee's actions, however, must be approved by majority vote of a governing council on which each participating government will have one member.

Executive authority of UNRRA will be invested in a director general, who will be appointed by the council on "the nomination by unanimous vote of the central committee."

It is expected the first director general will be Herbert H. Lehman, director of the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, established last winter in the United States State Department.

Secretary Hull said it was hoped the agreement could be signed at the White House in November and that this Government is suggesting the first session of the council of the new organization be held immediately thereafter. He suggested the first meeting would be held "some place outside of Washington."

Under the draft agreement, the UNRRA will endeavor to "meet the basic needs of the victims of war in territories controled by the United Nations, including areas liberated from enemy control." Its activities, however, will be subject to consent and control of military authorities in areas where hostilities or "military necessities" continue and in any given territory "will be determined in consultation with the government of that territory and subject to its consent."

Food, fuel, clothing, shelter and medical services were mentioned among the basic necessities and essential services to be provided. Each member government will contribute to the support of the body, but the amount to be provided is left to that government.

The draft will be presented to the Senate today by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, a subcommittee of which has worked closely with agencies drawing up the agreement and has been satisfied Congress will have control over United States participation through its power of appropriations.

No estimate of the amount this country may need to appropriate has yet been officially suggested.

The plan to push foreign expansion of agriculture, however, is expected to be accomplished at relatively small cost to this country. A division of authority has held back the program to date, the Commodity Credit Corp. having often withheld approval of plans presented by the OEW before the latter agency was reorganized and placed inside the State Department. Also, there has been disagreement on crops that should be pushed and the amounts of seeds and machinery needed. OEW planners were accused of wanting to make over the agricultural economy of other countries rather than concentrating on immediate war and postwar food needs.

The Gallup Poll . . .

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 23.—As the 1944 political campaign gets under way, it is becoming increasingly apparent that the fortunes of the Democratic Party are almost completely tied to one man—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In the course of talking to thousands of Democratic voters representing a true cross-section of the party's rank and file, the Institute has found that Mr. Roosevelt is their overwhelming choice for nominee next year. Additional evidence of the extent to which the party's success at the polls depends on Roosevelt is furnished in a new presidential "trial heat" just completed by the Institute.

Wallace Ranks Next

In this test race, Henry A. Wallace, the Democratic leader who stands next to Roosevelt in popularity with the party's voters, was pitted against Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the most popular Republican candidate at the moment. Voters were asked to state their choice if presented with the two men as opposing candidates.

The results give Governor Dewey a decided advantage at this time. They show that Dewey would likely carry every section of the country except the South. In terms of total popular vote he would have a 6-to-4 advantage against Wallace.

This is in sharp contrast to the results of a similar trial heat in which Dewey was pitted against Roosevelt himself. In that survey Roosevelt polled a majority.

The contrast, indicating the strength which President Roosevelt's prestige gives to the Democratic Party, is shown in tabular form below.

Trial Heats

Dewey	60%
Wallace	40
Dewey	45
Roosevelt	55

The sectional vote in the Dewey-Wallace test race follows:

	Dewey	Wallace
New England	69%	31%
Middle Atlantic	64	36
East Central	62	38
West Central	61	39
Rocky Mountain	61	39
South	36	64
Pacific Coast	64	36

The above results reflect sentiment only as of this time. If Wallace were actually nominated and had the full backing of Roosevelt as well as the aid of the Democratic Party's election machinery, he might reasonably be expected to do better than the above percentages indicate.

"One-Leader" Party

But the survey results do suggest that the Democratic Party, after 10 years in office, remains largely a "one-leader party." A number of liberal writers have deplored the fact that the "progressive movement" in the United States leans so heavily on one personality, and claim that it must be weak indeed as a movement if there is only one man in the country who can successfully carry its banner at the polls.

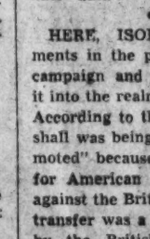
The survey results likewise suggest that the Democratic Party itself will bring increasing pressure on Roosevelt to run again, if for no other reason than the practical difficulties involved in trying to win without him.

Political Tempest

By Ernest Lindley

Proposal To Transfer Marshall

IN THE EXCITEMENT over the proposal that General Marshall be appointed to a high Allied field command, a distinction must be drawn between the misgivings of many of his colleagues in the American armed services and the furor in political circles.



LINDLEY

The misgivings among General Marshall's colleagues are partly personal, partly based on the solid belief that he is more useful in Washington as Chief of Staff and a more influential member of the Combined (American-British) Chiefs of Staff than he would be in London as Allied commander. A new Chief of Staff, even though he were Marshall's choice, inevitably would lead gradually, if not immediately, to changes in personnel. Naturally, some of the men holding important posts in Marshall's organization feel apprehensive.

Likewise, General Marshall's associates on the Joint (American) Chiefs of Staff want no change in what is now a smooth-working combination.

The tip to several members of Congress and a few correspondents that Marshall's transfer was under serious consideration, if it had not been actually decided upon, came from officers who are opposed to his leaving Washington. Attention was drawn more emphatically to the matter a week ago by the two unofficial service weeklies: The Army-Navy Register, which reported that Marshall would be shifted to Britain as Commander in Chief in the European theater, and the Army and Navy Journal, which said that he would stay in Washington, in spite of the efforts of "powerful interests" to "eliminate" him.

HERE, ISOLATIONIST elements in the press took up the campaign and swiftly projected it into the realm of the fantastic. According to these organs, Marshall was being "ousted" or "demoted" because he had stood up for American rights and ideas against the British: the projected transfer was a subtle conspiracy by the British and President Roosevelt to make possible the appointment of a Chief of Staff who would be more amenable to British views. According to one rumor, heard or imagined in Congress and aired in this section of the press, Associate Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter was the master brain behind the maneuver.

The attack thus followed the well-known isolationist line, seeking to sow distrust of the British and insinuating that Roosevelt is their tool. It was summed up in a passage from the remarks of Representative Jessie Sumner (Republican) of Illinois, on the floor of the House on Monday, September 20: "A few weeks ago I heard they were trying to get General Marshall kicked upstairs because he stands up for our American rights and, after Quebec, they started to get rid of Admiral Leahy for the same reasons. For the same reason they keep General MacArthur from heading our war effort. Their technique is subtle. Whenever they find an officer who stands up for our American rights they get some American officer they can handle to ask that the officer they cannot handle be put somewhere that looks like a promotion, or sent to South America, or given a vacation."

As to the incidental inaccuracies: No one has made an effort to get rid of, or otherwise disturb, Admiral Leahy, who holds the President's full confidence as his personal Chief of Staff and as a member of the Combined Chiefs of Staff. Justice Frankfurter has been away from Washington nearly all summer, and although at times in the past he has been consulted about some diplomatic appointments and certain aspects of our foreign relations, these occasions, according to informed and reliable sources, have become extremely rare. He has had no part at any time in the formulation of military policy.

AS TO THE principal charge—that General Marshall is being transferred because the British want to get rid of him—the answer is self-evident. The proposal is to put him in command of all Allied forces engaged in the war against Hitler, if not all of them throughout the world. As such, his control over British military forces and their use would be far greater than it could be in his present capacity—greater probably than the British have yielded to any military man of another nation, including Foch, in modern times. The acceptance of Marshall as Allied commander to conduct operations which, as Mr. Churchill has indicated, will include the great cross-Channel assault on the continent, should be regarded as a major concession by the British to the United States, and as a tribute to their confidence in Marshall.

As to Prime Minister Churchill's high opinion of Marshall there have been many evidences—even though Churchill's strategic concepts have differed at times from Marshall's. Marshall's appointment could be construed as evidence that his views have been substantially indorsed and that he is therefore being called upon to execute them.

The attack from these isolationist quarters has therefore been puzzling to persons informed of the main circumstances surrounding Marshall's projected transfer. The explanation may be simply that these eager critics were so poorly informed that they misjudged their opportunity to create a political issue. Some of them may have sensed that if the waters were not muddied, Marshall's proposed promotion would stand forth clearly as a credit not only to Marshall, but to Roosevelt, who picked him as Chief of Staff. Or, it has been suggested in some quarters, if Marshall leaves his present post, the clamor for a Chief of Staff who is "independent" of British influence might be developed into a demand for the appointment of General MacArthur. It would be unfair to MacArthur to imply that his interview in Australia a few days ago had this possibility in mind, but this conceivable interpretation has been noted among the politically minded in Washington. MacArthur has been so long out of touch, that his appointment as Chief of Staff would hardly be considered. Almost certainly if there is a successor to Marshall during this war, it will be a man designated by him, since it is his organization which has built the new American Army, done all the war planning on the Army side, and is now functioning smoothly. An alternative, already publicly discussed, is to permit Marshall to remain as Chief of Staff, merely taking a leave of absence while serving as Allied Commander in Chief.

Conversion To Coal Ends

Due To Uncertainty

Regulations requiring industrial and commercial users of fuel oil to convert to coal were suspended by the Petroleum Administration for War yesterday in one of several moves affecting the civilian heating situation next winter.

Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes said the suspension was ordered in view of the uncertainties in the coal situation, which include shortage of delivery equipment and manpower. Householders already have been freed from regulations requiring conversion from oil to coal.

More Stoves Assured

At the same time, the War Production Board and the Office of Price Administration took independent steps to assure an adequate supply of cooking and heating stoves during the fall and winter months.

OPA authorized dealers and distributors to increase allowable inventories of coal and wood stoves by 50 per cent between October 1 and October 30, in order to provide increased stocks to meet seasonal demands.

WPB telegraphed queries to cooking and heating stove manufacturers asking specific data on present problems of manpower and raw materials interfering with adequate production.

Ickes stressed that these actions do not mean that we are "over the hump" as far as necessary oil supplies are concerned. He also pointed out that yesterday's suspension does not apply to conversion activity now in progress.

Represents Huge Saving

The conversion program to date, it was disclosed, has saved the equivalent of 176,500 barrels of fuel oil a day. Of this total, 137,155 barrels daily have been saved in the 17 Eastern States and the District of Columbia.

The Solid Fuel Administration also removed restrictions on shipments of buckwheat (rice) anthracite because of increased supplies.

The Office of Price Administration, meanwhile, announced that the amount of anthracite which can be delivered to consumers in the East under the present priority system will be figured separately for each cooking or heating unit.

Under the priority system, consumers cannot stock up on coal now beyond 50 per cent of the amount consumed last year. If different type coal is used for a stove and a furnace, the percentage is based on the consumption figures of each unit.

Rep. Engle Takes Congress Seat

California's new Congressman, Clair Engle, took the oath of office yesterday as a member of the House of Representatives, replacing the late Harry L. Englebright (Republican) who died last spring.

Addition of Engle, a Democrat, to the California delegation, changes the line-up to 13 Democrats and 10 Republicans.

American Interest In European Settlement

Out of the question of our relationship with Russia arises America's vital interest in the settlement of European affairs; and it is plain that our grand objective must be a settlement which does not call for a permanent American military intervention in Europe to maintain it. I am speaking, to be explicit, of the force to maintain the European order against Russia after Germany has ceased to be the great power of continental Europe. A settlement which could be maintained only by aligning American, and hence British, military power against Russia in Europe would set the stage for a third world war in both Europe and Asia.

Russia and the Atlantic community have, therefore, a profound common interest in a European settlement which will maintain itself without bringing them into conflict. The test of whether there is to be peace or war will be whether the borderland between Russia and the Atlantic states is settled by consent or by pressure, dictation and diplomatic violence.

It is not possible for the United States, and hence not possible for Britain, to maintain a settlement in this region by military force. Our power is on the sea and in the air, and our interest in the interior of the European continent is indirect, concerned with it vitally only as it bears upon our relations with great world powers like Germany in the receding past, like Russia in the emergent future.

It follows that we cannot agree again to the underlying conception of the Versailles settlement which treated the border region as a cordon sanitaire, between Russia and the rest of Europe. The barrier has no military value. Germany broke through it easily. Russia could break through it easily. Britain, liberated France and America will not and cannot stand guard on it. They are not strong enough. They cannot permit Germany to stand guard on it because to reconstitute the German military power is to alienate Russia and thus leave France and Britain exposed, without Russian help, to the power of reconstituted Germany. Finally, the barrier cannot be reconstructed because Russia, emerging from this war the great military power of Europe, can erase the barrier by forming an alliance with post-Nazi Germany.

Does this mean that Poland, the Danubian states and the Balkans have no prospect of assured independence and that they are destined to become satellites of Russia or to be incorporated into the Soviet Union? The question cannot be answered at this time, but I believe that these states would have no prospect of independence if America and Britain, working with the governments in exile, attempted to reconstitute them as the outposts of a western coalition against Russia. When the war ends the Russians will almost certainly have an overwhelming preponderance of military force in this region, and it is inconceivable that the Red army, if it liberates these peoples from the Nazi conquerors will permit governments operating from London and Washington to organize anti-Russian states on the Russian border.

Even the suspicion of an attempt to do this is bound to revive the bitter memories of the Allied intervention of 1919 in the Russian civil war. Then the question will not be how firmly we can guarantee the independence of these states, but whether Russia will permit them to exist at all as independent states.

Moreover, these states are by no means homogeneous or united. They have many deep differences among themselves. Therefore the attempt of some of them to play a part in anti-Russian power politics will almost certainly cause others among them to make power alliances with Russia. If Poland and Hungary, for example, sought to make themselves outposts of an anti-Russian barrier, it is probable that the Czechs, the Bulgars and perhaps the Rumanians would quickly come to terms with Russia. What then would be the prospect for Britain and America? Would they furnish arms to Poland and Hungary? If they did they would be directly embroiled with Russia. If they did not, how could Poland and Hungary find the equipment?

The question then is whether after the defeat and disarmament of Germany and Italy the fact that there is no conflict of great powers in this region, nor even a balance of power, can be made to mean that these states will change their basic political assumptions, retire from power politics, and seek a neutralized role like that of the Scandinavians and the Swiss.

Law, it has been said, and not power, is the defense of small states. It would seem that the hope of a good settlement on Russia's western borderlands depends upon whether the border states will adopt a policy of neutralization, and whether Russia will respect and support it. The best interests of the United States would be served by such a solution. It would not bring us or the members of the Atlantic Community into conflict with Russia. It would give Poland, the Danubian states, and the Balkans the only form of security we are able to offer them, and it would give Russia security resting on the fact that the nations of Central and Eastern Europe, after Germany has been disarmed, could not become the spearheads of a western coalition.

Our relations with Russia in Europe are indirect, but with Russia in Asia our relations will become, after the destruction of Japanese power, direct and of the highest consequence. In fact, here Russia is physically the nearest to us of any great power, excepting only Canada as a member of the British Commonwealth. The farthest of the Aleutians is only a few hundred miles by sea from Petropavlovsk in Kamchatka. Alaska is nearer to Siberia than it is to the United States. The shortest airways from America to China pass over Russia territory.

Our relations with Russia can no longer be regulated, then, by the old rule that each is to the other a potential friend in the rear of its potential enemies. The defeat of Japan and the advent of the age of polar flying will make Russia and the United States neighbors. Is there a conflict of vital interest which could cause enmity? One thing can be said at once: there is no boundary dispute, no American territory which Russia covets, no Russian territory to which the United States has ever laid any claim whatever. Thus if there is a potential conflict of interest, the conflict cannot arise directly.

OPA to Publish Price Book In War on Black Markets

"The Wartime Consumer's Bill of Rights," a booklet on how to tell top legal prices, will be published by the District OPA and various trade groups in a community-wide campaign to stamp out black market operations, beginning this Monday, it was announced yesterday.

Climax of the drive, which will be carried on with the support of more than 100 local organizations, District schools and theaters, the OPA said, will be the signing of the home front pledge to pay no more than top legal prices and to accept no rationed goods without giving up ration stamps.

"Transactions of the black market can be controlled only if the people themselves take a strong hand against them," Robert K. Thompson, District OPA director, said in urging full cooperation.

Motion picture theaters throughout the city will show the film "Black Marketing" during next week and in addition, 21 Warner Brothers theaters will have facilities for signing of the home front pledge in all lobbies.

Numerous industrial groups have "expressed their keen interest in participating in the program through advertising, window displays and distribution of educational material," the OPA said.

Emphasis will be given to showing consumers how the pledge may be kept, Thompson said.

D. C. Marine Saw Wounded Officer Slain

An Eastern High School graduate, now a Marine raider in the Pacific area was among a group who recently paid tribute to their lieutenant, killed by Jap snipers at Guadalcanal as he lay wounded.

The D. C. man, Pvt. Rayfield N. Graves, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Graves, live at 18 7th st. se., told an Associated Press reporter he was with the lieutenant when the latter met his death. Graves recalled the lieutenant had previously risked his life to administer morphine to a pain-wracked wounded Jap.

Private Graves, with his family, came to Washington from Jefferson, N. H., in 1934. After graduating from Eastern he became employed by the Department of the Interior.

He was studying accounting at Benjamin Franklin University night school when the Japs struck Pearl Harbor. He left school immediately to join the Marines.

The elder Graves, now employed at the Navy Yard here as a machinist, volunteered in the Canadian army in World War I and served overseas as a machine gunner.

'Swing Shift Maisie' Nabs Her Man at the Capitol

CUT TO THE SAME GENERAL PATTERN as its numerous predecessors in the series, "Swing Shift Maisie," screen feature for the new week at Loew's Capitol Theater, makes a bid for timely interest by placing its major action in a West Coast airplane factory and developing its plot among the warworkers.

Maisie Ravier, however, is not lost sight of as a small-time show girl. Early in the footage, she is discovered as the glamorous decoration of a dog act playing the Propeller Club. It is from this spot that Breezy McLaughlin berates his erstwhile boss at the Victory Airplane Factory for having headed off his commission in Washington because Breezy was an indispensable test pilot at the plant. His remonstrance is so stentorian that it breaks up the act and serves the more useful purpose of making him acquainted with Maisie's acrid tongue.

So starts a romance that gets along swimmingly until Maisie makes a tactical error. She introduces Iris Reed, whom she has rescued from a fake suicide, to Breezy as a particularly pathetic case. To call Iris a cat would be to insult all felines, as it turns out. Not only does she lure Breezy almost to the point of Yuma and a parson, but, addicted to the line of least resistance, turns Maisie in as one who secured her job under false pretenses—which is wholly true—and is currently involved in a sabotage plot with three Nazis.

Having persuaded the head man to relent and let the commission go through, Breezy gets back from his Texas training field just in time to bring everything out right side up. And there you have it.

Director Norman Z. McLeod has managed to keep the Mary C. McCall, jr.-Robert Halff script moving at the brisk pace characteristic of all the "Maisie" pictures. The script is not too tightly integrated and some of the laxity among the factory workers grates a little on one's notion of efficiency, but, after all, this is a comedy-romance and not a Government documentary. The comedy reposes more in lines than situation and the lines are well read in the Brooklyn and flying-field vernaculars by a cast that is thoroughly diverting, if not especially distinguished.

Three Principals Carry the Film

Heading the competent, journeyman cast are Ann Sothern, James Craig and Jean Rogers. The role of Maisie, of course, belongs to Miss Sothern, stock, lock and both barrels. In its present manifestation, the glib and hair-trigger self-reliance of the wandering show girl shows no signs of slipping from the high level of excellence it and the audience have always enjoyed. As the test pilot-lieutenant, James Craig turns in a heady and hearty performance and Jean Rogers is lovely to look at in the role of the back-biting, feminine menace. Of the others Connie Gilchrist, as the boarding-house keeper, and John Qualen, the owner of the dog act, who perjures himself into a place of importance in the story, are the only ones who matter.

The stage at the Capitol this week is given over entirely to Tony Pastor's band and specialists. The band is as usual, bearing down on fortissimos and dissonance, with Stubby Pastor and Joe "Paradiddle" Morris, stepping out on trumpet and drums, respectively, and the conductor chipping in with his inevitable song with double-entendre lyrics——this time, "Making Whoopee" to take the place of "Let's Do It." Among the specialists, the Three Claire Sisters make up in speed what they lack in precision in their acrobatic tap routines; blonde Patti Powers sings with effectiveness in a throaty voice, and Johnny Woods, just back from a year and a half with the USO in the camps, stops the performance cold with a rapid-fire catalogue of radio impersonations that strike a high average of merit.

Foremost of the two auxiliary screen attractions is the March of Time's issue called "Airways to Peace" and devoting itself to the constantly growing size and service of the Army Transport Command, which now circles the globe with vital equipment and supplies for all the fighting fronts. The other is the Fox Movietone News, embodying first views of the invasion of Italy and the bombing of Rome.

Sam Jack Kaufman's two-part orchestral overture, consisting of "Beautiful Galatea" and "Sunday, Monday or Always," with vocals splendidly sung by Lynn Allison and Bobby Simpson, and Art Brown's roof-raising songfest still further augment a bill notable, at least, for its variety.

'Behind the Rising Sun' Tells An Important Story at Keith's

By Marjorie Kelly

"Behind the Rising Sun," which yesterday morning opened on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, is a vigorous indictment of the Japanese enemy in terms of lurid melodrama.

Emmet Lavery wrote the script from James R. Young's book of the same name, much in the manner in which "Hitler's Children" was adapted from Gregor Ziemer's "Education for Death." The story is fictitious, but based upon well-authenticated incidents.

In view of the average American's scant understanding of the Nipponese, this screen review of the enemy's philosophy, tactics, and manner of living, though leaving much to be desired in completeness, is, nevertheless, of great interest.

The film gains importance from the fact that it doesn't content itself with presenting a sensational record of atrocities, but attempts to show some of the shadings of Japanese political opinion, depicting the liberal point of view through two people, the father and the sweetheart of the young Cornell-educated Japanese who is the central figure.

Repents of His Bargain

The father is American-educated, too, but religious mysticism, emperor-worship, and a submissive nature cause him to be caught up briefly in the hysteria for Japanese world-domination. Not until he has forced his son into military service and watched the boy disintegrate into a fanatic with a single idea—the destiny of Japan—does he recant, and then he registers his protest by committing hara-kiri.

The boy's sweetheart meets her country's fate in a healthier manner. Even though her own people have turned against her, and she has a chance to escape to America, she chooses to stay in Japan and await the revolution.

The characterization of these two is an important thing to have done, inasmuch, as Hollywood, a powerful molder of public opinion, has heretofore given very little sign that it understands the Japanese is made an enemy not by the color of his skin but by his politics.

Painted in Bold Strokes

If you expect any subtleties of interpretation of the Japanese character or thinking, you will be disappointed. This is primarily melodrama. The advocacy of American democracy is made in terms of a naive, breathless adoration of the United States.

Highlights of interest include scenes of the 1936 uprising; a fight between an American boxer and a Japanese wrestler; glimpses of the geisha girl system and of the outraging of Chinese women when a town is occupied by the Japs.

J. Carrol Naish, as the father, gives the only outstanding performance. Margo and Tom Neal are acceptable as the girl and boy, and George Givot is amusing as a Russian agent.

Prominent among the supplementary features is one titled "Oil Is Blood," a review of the importance of oil in this war, with some scenes of the building of the "Big Inch" pipeline.

John Qualen, Connie Gilchrist, Russell Gleason and Rose Hobart also are conspicuously cast.

Broadway Potpourri

New York, September 23.

The current revival of vaudeville throughout the Nation is due in some measure, to the activities of Fred F. Finklehoffe and Paul Small. They've produced "Laugh Time," "Show Time" and "Big Time." And it all started because of a girl. . . . Finkelhoffe was at M.-G.-M., earning a fancy salary as befitting the co-author of "Brother Rat." At a conference one afternoon, the producers discussed a number of singing comediennes for one of the roles. All were unavailable. After 40 names—none the one Fred wanted to hear—were mentioned, all of whom were working on other jobs, someone finally proposed "Vera Vey." Winklehoffe arose, bade farewell to Hollywood, and started the production of his first vaudeville show, "Time," starring George Jessel, Jack Haley and the present Mrs. Finklehoffe—the singing comedienne, Ella Logan.

Pvt. William Saroyan has been removed to the hospital at Governors Island . . . District Attorney Hogan is questioning a noted legislator, who recently made a comeback. His name hasn't been mentioned as yet in any investigation . . . Freedom House's annual freedom award will be presented to Walter Lippmann, by Wendell Willkie at the Astor on October 24 . . . Gilbert Miller will produce "Happy Marriage," the new play by Representative Clare Boothe Luce.

The City of Los Angeles now is making arrangements for the first postwar World's Fair . . . New Orleans was interested in having a world's fair, and sent an emissary to Billy Rose, veteran of the Fort Worth, Cleveland and New York expositions. "Mr. Rose," the emissary asked him, "what do you think of the idea of a World's Fair for New Orleans?" . . . Billy, who has made many visits to that gay, colorful city, replied: "I'd just build a fence around the city and charge admission.

Sonny Tufts is Hollywood's newest leading man. He's featured in "So Proudly We Hail," with Claudette Colbert, Paulette Goddard and Veronica Lake. Last year he arrived in New York unknown. He visited the clubs—the Stork, Morocco, Copacabana—attracting attention wherever he went. One night, at El Morocco, he was noticed by Dennis King, the actor, and Lex Thompson, the sportsman. "He must be somebody," said King, "A man who looks like a somebody is a somebody" . . . "Right now, he's a nobody," said Thompson—who had know Tufts at Yale. "But you've given me an idea. I'll make a somebody out of him." Thompson then effected a deal whereby, in return for a $50-a-week allowance, Tufts would give him 50 per cent of his earnings for two years. Thompson sent him to Hollywood and now—as a result of Dennis King's simple comment in a night club—Sonny Tufts is on his way to stardom.

The manager of the revived hit, "The Merry Widow," received two visits from staff members. The first was Robert Stoltz, the composer of "Two Hearts in Three-Quarter Time," who conducted the orchestra during the long European run of "The Merry Widow," and who has been conducting the performances here. Stoltz submitted his two weeks' notice of quitting . . . The second visitor was the doorman of the theater. Because he had failed to get an increase in salary, he was submitting his three weeks' notice. "I hear Mr. Stoltz also is leaving," said the doorman. "Well, you're losing two of your best men."

Stays in her room and plays with her pet cats. Charlie dislikes 'em. They scratch him. But some folk think they never dug deep enough.

Genesis of a Name

I asked Lynn Riggs why "Green Grow the Lilacs" was called "Oklahoma." He said at its tryout in Boston it had a horrible title. He didn't like it nor did Lawrence Langner, who said, "Play is laid in Oklahoma. My wife came from there. It would make her happy to give her State publicity." And that's how it got its title. Too many people underestimate the value of Agnes De Mille's dance routines in "Oklahoma".

Living Costs Held to 4.8% Gain in Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

It cost 4.8 per cent more to live last month than it did in August, 1942, and 19.5 per cent more than January, 1941, the National Industrial Conference Board said yesterday.

The cost of living for wage and low-salary workers was less than in July in 48 of 69 industrial cities surveyed, more in 18, and unchanged in 3, the board said.

Average for the Nation was a decline in cost of 0.3 per cent, with Flint, Mich., enjoying the greatest decline, 1.8 per cent, and Bridgeport, Conn., having the greatest increase, 1.5 per cent, comparing last month with July.

For the 12-month period Macon, Ga., reported the largest increase, 8.2 per cent, and New Haven, Conn., the smallest, 2.1 per cent.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

New AHP President

Promotion of Knox Ide from executive vice president to president of the American Home Products Corp. was announced yesterday by Board Chairman Alvin G. Brush. Walter F. Silbersack, a vice president, succeeded Ide.

Ide in turn succeeds Harry S. Howard, who has been elected president of the wholly owned subsidiary, Wyeth, Inc., ethical drug house just formed from seven AHP subsidiaries.

Line's Air Express Surges

Northwest Airlines carried 141,347 pounds of air express in August, an increase of 37,000 pounds over the July total, J. W. Hutchinson, Washington district traffic manager, announced yesterday. The large increase was made possible by the return of one of the company's huge airliners after service with the Army, he said.

Since return of the plane Northwest Airlines has added four new flights, increasing its mileage by 4500 miles daily.

Sales Manager Named

Randolph C. Walker, president of Aircraft Accessories Corporation, has announced the appointment of Frank A. Rudolph as Eastern sales manager, in charge of sales in the Dayton, Ohio, and Washington, D. C., offices. As Eastern regional manager, Mr. Rudolph has been head of the corporation's New York office in Rockefeller Center and will maintain his offices there.

Rail Hearing Slated

Judge Luther B. Way has ordered a hearing to be held on October 18 for the purpose of considering the redemption of Seaboard Air Line Railway receivers' certificates.

The order provides for a hearing at which parties in interest may be heard to consider whether an order should be entered "authorizing and directing the redemption at the principal amount thereof and accrued interest of the $12,341,600, principal amount of receivers' certificates outstanding and held by the public."

Browns Rout Newsom to Trounce Nats, 12-3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Well, well, just as the grubbing was getting tough what should be dropped into our laps but another juicy Cleveland incident. It isn't the second front that Joe Stalin has been asking for, it's the second front that Lou Boudreau didn't ask for. It has sputtered into action again. Cleveland hasn't changed much.

POVICH

This time it's Jim Bagby, the pitcher, who is making trouble for Boudreau. Like many another Cleveland manager—remember Oscar Vitt and Walter Johnson and Roger Peckinpaugh?—Boudreau has discovered he has been outflanked by one of his ball players. Bagby has taken the whole thing up with the Cleveland front office, habitual haven of disgruntled Cleveland ballplayers.

The open portals of the front office is the cross that the Cleveland manager, whoever he may be, always has to bear. It's a well-beaten path by this time for players with a grievance against whomever may be managing the club. Bagby, who says he doesn't want to play for Boudreau any more, declares "the front office has been fine and knows I want to be traded, even if I have to work for less money with another club."

On another club Bagby wouldn't have dared to poke his nose into the front office to squawk about being fined $100 for being out of condition. He wouldn't have progressed within eight outer doors of the office of President Ed Barrow of the Yankees on the same kind of a mission, and Clark Griffith would have called in the 250-pound superintendent of the ground force to deal with a player who squawked against the manager.

But at Cleveland, ah, it's different. In Cleveland, it's the style to run bawling to the front office and make a case against the manager. Against Oscar Vitt it was mass rebellion in 1941 when Bob Feller led the charge of the light-headed brigade and got such a sympathetic hearing from Owner Alva Bradley that Vitt was fired almost pronto.

It's only a lion-hearted citizen who would take the job of managing a Cleveland club, anyway. Walter Johnson chucked it with pleasure a few years ago after getting no more support from Bradley than Stalin would find in a Nazi concentration camp. Johnson discovered quickly that he couldn't make his orders stick, what with Bradley's door always open to the players who didn't like the manager.

Back in 1935, Manager Johnson whom Washington fans knew for 20 years as a most tractable and delightful personality, was having some trouble with Willie Kamm, a veteran infielder on the Cleveland club. Johnson finally deduced that Kamm was second-guessing him and developing an untoward influence on some of the Indians' younger players. He announced that he was suspending Kamm indefinitely and sending him back to Cleveland.

But he couldn't make it stick. Kamm sought out Bradley, and Bradley refused to back up Johnson. What the Cleveland club owner did do was announce that he would seek Judge Landis' advice about the squabble between Johnson and Kamm and leave it up to Landis to decide. Landis very properly dumped the whole mess back in Bradley's lap with the unsubtle hint that it was none of his business and Bradley should try to be capable of handling his own affairs.

As for Bagby, he's something of a character himself, aside from being a pretty good pitcher. His rupture with Boudreau maintains his 1.000 batting average in the beefing league. The Boston Red Sox, the club that brought him up from the minors, traded him to Cleveland because Manager Joe Cronin found him something less than delightful. "I'm glad to get away from Cronin," said Bagby at that time, much as he is now saying he doesn't want to play for Boudreau.

When Boudreau took the Cleveland job last year he was hailed as Kid Harmony, the nice young man who would put an end to the internecine strife among the Indians, but it cropped out again earlier this summer. Jeff Heath didn't like the way Boudreau was using him merely as a pinch hitter and said so. After that, Heath played regularly until he was injured.

Boudreau is taking the very practical view of the Bagby mess in declaring that he won't trade the pitcher unless he gets talent of equal value. "I'd rather have a disgruntled winner than a happy loser," says Boudreau, a philosophy with which all baseball managers will agree, but he may find it difficult to keep his disgruntled winner, nevertheless. When Outfielder Bruce Campbell was playing for the Indians a few years ago, he by-passed Manager Vitt on a bee-line to the front office, told Mr. Bradley he was unhappy, and got himself traded to the White Sox forthwith.

Bagby's rebellion will hardly cost Boudreau his job, like similar uprisings ousted Johnson, Steve O'Neill, Peckinpaugh and Vitt, because Boudreau has a contract that runs through the 1945 season. But in the measure in which Bagby gets away with his plea to the front office will depend Boudreau's success at Cleveland. The Cleveland manager never knows the front from the rear, anyway. There's always shooting on both sides of him.

Carrasquel Hit for Five Runs in 7th

Defeat Practically Ends Pennant Hopes; Boo's Streak Halted; Case Steals Base

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Buck Newsom's Washington uniform didn't disguise him in the eyes of the Browns last night. They recognized Newsom as the same guy who couldn't win for the Browns and belted him emphatically for six runs and a running start on a 12-3 victory over the Nats.

His old mates dispatched Newsom from the scene with a four-run, fifth-inning rally, and put an end to the big fellow's three-game winning streak for the Nats.

The 6500 customers were very much displeased by the Nats' performance what with Newsom and Carrasquel allowing the Browns 16 hits and their supporting cast tossing five errors into the proceedings. Al Milnar pitched nine-hit ball for the Browns and breezed behind his ample lead.

Painful Defeat

It was a painful sort of beating for the Nats, costing them a precious half game in their second-place battle with the Cleveland Indians who split a twin bill with the Red Sox yesterday. The Nats' grip on second thus dwindled to 2½ games.

And it practically ruined the Nats' pennant chances. With the Yankees winning yesterday, one more Washington defeat or one more Yankee victory will clinch the pennant for New York.

George Case stole a base for the Nats but made no progress in his race with Wally Moses of the White Sox, for the base-stealing title. At Philadelphia earlier in the day, Moses stole his 54th of the season and Case still trails him by one theft.

As for the ball game, the Browns started getting rough with Newsom in the fourth inning when they took a 2-0 lead, and they got very rough with him in the fifth with four more runs. Newsom's fast ball wasn't fast and his one attempt to throw his blimp pitch evolved as a single for Al Zarilla.

Browns Break Tie

The Browns broke the scoreless deadlock in the fourth after McQuinn led off with a single. A bit later Vernon Stephens doubled against the fence in left center and a bit later Mark Christman got the second of his four hits, a single to center, and the Browns had two runs.

There were no indications that the Browns were going to score four runs in the fifth, with Newsom getting the first two outs easily. Then he threw his blimp to Zarilla who singled to center and the panic was on. McQuinn walked, Laabs hit a bad-hopping single over Sullivan's shoulder, Stephens doubled to right center, Brynes beat out a hit to Priddy and, with a couple of boots by the Nats, that added up to four more St. Louis runs.

Carrasquel Hit Hard

They got their last six runs off Alex Carrasquel, five of them in the seventh inning when three bunts messed the Nats up. Carrasquel threw wild to second on one bunt, Bob Johnson dropped Carrasquel's throw on another, and on a third bunt between Johnson and Carrasquel nobody whosoever picked up the ball which rolled unmolested for a hit for Christman.

Milnar found the Nats a soft touch. He allowed one run per inning in the fourth, fifth and sixth, and that was all. In his one rough spot, when the Nats filled the bases with none out in the fourth, Milnar escaped with only one-run damage because Giuliani lined a drive into the mitt of McQuinn who stepped on first for a double play.

Dodgers Hit Brazle, Stop Cards, 4 to 3

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 23.—Alpha Brazle, a rookie left-hander who is expected to start one of the World Series games, failed to subdue the Brooklyn Dodgers today as Whitlow Wyatt beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4 to 3 for his tenth consecutive triumph.

The Dodgers, using a lineup liberally sprinkled with freshmen, made nine hits and led from the third inning on. They scored single runs in the third, fourth and fifth frames off Brazle and added what proved to be the deciding tally off Lefty Harry Brecheen in the top of the ninth.

Coolidge Hopes Seeds Of 1942 Will Sprout

Coach Conn Expects Club Will Rise From Role of Series Doormat This Season

(This is another of a series on Washington area high school football prospects.)

Coach Gilbert Conn., one time George Washington University star, planted some football seeds at Coolidge High last year that he hopes have grown into a victory garden. In fact, if the 1943 Colts can collect at least one victory in the high school championship series that opens today, they will have improved 1000 per cent over their showing last year. Conn was tossed into a rough coaching spot in 1942. Coolidge had its first official football team and boasted little besides the greenest of green material.

Conn spent most of the fall pulling the none-to-numerous hairs from his head and when it came time to put away uniforms his boys had accomplished little on paper. Five defeats in five chances and a single touchdown was their title series record. In outside games, they won three, however. But Coolidge went down battling and learning.

This Is the Year

Freshman Joe Zilch, who never missed a game, kept shaking his fist at the opposing bench and yelling, "Wait until next year."

Well, this is the next year. Coolidge might not have the 1943 hich school football champions but it has a pretty fair eleven and one that promises not to be a series doormat. At least that is the impression gathered by hanging around Fifth and Sheridian streets nw.

A checkup of scholastic marks and the physical examinations have left Coach Conn with a squad of 35 boys and, what's more, 17 of them were in Coolidge uniform last year. In fact, the eleven boys slated to start today against Wilson High saw some kind of action for the Colts in 1942.

Conn will trot a 180-pound average line onto the field today and he might shift to make it pack more beef. He has a sturdy backfield and boys who are fast on their feet with heads crammed full of the Conn brand of football.

In the backfield, Coolidge will start Addie Bassin, Jim Bassinger, John Shellenberger and Dick Bergmann. Buck Henry and Paul Sickle will go in at end, with Howard Ticktin and Bob Webb, tackles; Frank Culler and Speed Harrison, guards, and Barry Shields, center.

Webb, a son of Heinie Webb of local sandlot fame, is the heavyweight of the squad, at 240, closely pressed by Ed Rowzee, lifeguard at the Takoma pool, who packs 238.

Has Done One-Man Job

Coach Conn has done a one-man job at Coolidge. Until last Friday, when Bob Dwyer was sent to him as an assistant, Conn has been conditioning and footballing his boys by his lonesome. In two scrimmages, against Anacostia and Western, Coolidge made fair showings.

Jerseys for today's clash were given out yesterday. End Buck Henry, the tallest boy on the squad, was given No. 19, the number that the towering Charley Malone used so successfully with the Redskins, and Addie Bassin, who essays to be a vest-pocket edition of Sammy Baugh, will carry the passing champion's "33."

Cocaptains for the season were elected yesterday. Center Barry Shields and Back John Shellenberger were honored.

Conn believes he has told his boys all he knows. It will be up to them to produce, starting today.

Bears to Aid WMC Probe Of Players

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Ralph Brizzolara, acting general manager of the Chicago Bears, offered his cooperation to the War Manpower Commission today in an investigation of those players on the pro football team who left defense jobs to play ball this fall.

The WMC seeks to determine whether those players have the necessary certificates of availability which would permit them to leave their jobs and play football.

Brizzolara voluntarily called upon William H. Spencer, regional director of the WMC, and was asked to supply data on the individual players, listing their occupations, if any, during the 30-day period prior to their engagement by the Bears. After a lapse of 30 days from previous employment, a certificate of availability is not necessary.

This provision and other provisions of the job stabilization program will be checked against each player, the WMC said.

Elmer Layden, president of the National Football League, will meet with Spencer tomorrow to volunteer his cooperation.

"The football clubs of our league always have cooperated with the war effort," said Layden. "If there are any irregularities we want to know about them, too. And they will be corrected. The war comes first."

George Strickler, veteran league statistician who is ni close contact with players and officials in the circuit, said "it is my firm belief no player in the league has violated any part of the job stabilization program."

Yanks Beat Tigers, 1-0; Russo Stars

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 23.—Marius Russo, the sore-armed southpaw, put himself in line for a World Series assignment today by pitching two-hit ball as the New York Yankees downed the Detroit Tigers 1 to 0.

It was the second straight triumph for Russo, who broke a personal five-game losing streak a week ago by holding the Philadelphia Athletics to four hits.

He fanned seven and walked four while handcuffing all the Tigers except Rookie Jimmy Outlaw, who smashed a single off Bill Johnson's shins in the second inning, and Joe Wood, who lined another single over Joe Gordon's head in the sixth.

By winning today the Yanks eliminated the Cleveland Indians from the pennant race and moved closer to the inevitable clinching of their 14th American League championship.

The Yankees needed two more triumphs to dispose of the stubborn Nats.

Coast Conference Reduced to 3 Teams; Lack of Players Given as Reason

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Idaho, Sept. 23.—Three Pacific Coast Conference schools—the University of Idaho, Washington State College and Oregon State College—jointly reported tonight a decision to withdraw from participation in conference football as such for 1943.

Withdrawal of these teams sounded the death knell of the Pacific Coast Conference as such. Out of 10 original members, the University of Washington remains alone in the northern half; California, Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles comprise the southern loop.

Stanford was the first major Coast team to abandon the sport. Montana University and the University of Oregon later withdrew.

J. A. (Babe) Brown, University of Idaho athletic director, issued this statement:

"As a result of conditions that have developed surrounding football at the University of Idaho, Washington State College and Oregon State College, these three institutions have mutually agreed to withdraw from participation in the Pacific Coast Conference for 1943."

Lack of manpower has been the reason for the temporary junking of football. Turnouts have been a matter of a dozen or so players.

Edward Atherton, commissioner of the conference, commented in an interview that "this does not necessarily mean abandonment of conference football for the duration in the Northwest."

Double Tragedy Hits Don Hutson; Shock Kills Father

By the Associated Press

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 23.—A double tragedy struck Don Hutson of the Green Bay Packers today.

Hutson, rated as the greatest pass receiver in professional football, first learned that his 23-year-old brother, Robert, an aviator, had been reported killed in action in the South Pacific. Then word was received that his father, R. B. Hutson, 56, had died in a Booneville, Ark., sanitarium, presumably of shock.

Hutson left at once by plane for his parents' home in Pine Bluff, Ark. It was uncertain whether he would be able to return in time for the Packer's first National League game here Sunday against the Chicago Bears.

McKechnie Sticks As Pilot of Reds

Cincinnati, Sept. 23 (AP).—William B. (Bill) McKechnie renewed his contract as manager of the Cincinnati Reds today, signing for one year at an undisclosed salary.

McKechnie, who came to the Reds in the winter of 1937, lifted the club from the National League cellar to fourth place in 1938, to league championship in 1939 and to the world title in 1940.

His original contract called for $25,000 a year plus a $5000 bonus if home attendance exceeded a certain figure.

High School Football Season Opens Today With 7 Games

4 Contests Scheduled in Title Series

Central to Open Defense of Crown; 3 Outside Frays On Gala Program

High school football, that hotbed of action and rivalry, makes its 1943 debut today with seven battles slated for Washington and the vicinity. Four of the games are scheduled in the public school championship series.

The line-up includes:

Anacostia at Central.

Coolidge at Wilson.

Tech at Western.

Eastern at Roosevelt (high school series), all at 4 o'clock.

Bullis at Washington-Lee, Ballston, 3:45 o'clock.

Thomas Jefferson at George Washington High, Alexandria, 8 o'clock.

Today's action will be first of the school year which may set a record for spectator interest. With college football almost erased hereabouts, grid fans are expected to flock to the scholastic encounters.

Central, with two straight schoolboy championships to its credit, swings into action against Anacostia at Central Stadium. The Vikings will be the team to beat this year as usual. They have a heavy experienced line and pack backs with speed. Coach Jan Janowski has uncovered several backfield threats, including Jim Donohue, shifted from end. Anacostia has a light, but plucky team and enters today's clash as the underdog.

Coach Fred Mulvey has plenty of beef for his Western eleven, particularly in an experienced line. However, he is reported to have some backfield and end worries. Tech was runner-up to Central last year, for the most part the 1943 squad is light and inexperienced.

At Roosevelt, Coach Artie Boyd has a line that knows football as a result of series-gained experience. He also has some backfield holdovers in Irv Morris, Ed Mifflin and John Moore. The Rough Riders appear capable of turning back a game Eastern club.

Wilson promises to be a strong factor in this series. The uptown boys have speed and experience, and hope to start the campaign with a triumph over Coolidge. The Colts, seeking their first series victory, will be steamed up, however.

Grays and Barons To Clash Tonight

The Homestead Grays will be striving to even the count with the Birmingham Barons when they meet tonight in another game of the Negro World Series which is scheduled to get under way at 8:30 p. m.

The Barons took the lead in the series three nights ago when Al Sayler limited them to five hits and won 4 to 2.

In an effort to square things up with the Alabamians, manager "Jim" Taylor will send one of his southpaw aces, either Edsel Walker or Roy Partlow, to the mound.

Baron Pilot Gus Welch has John Huber and Lefty McInnis ready to shoot against the Grays.

Last night the Grays and Barons battled 12 innings to a 5-5 count in Baltimore.

Bob Simmons Touchdown Club President

Robert C. Simmons has been elected president of the Touchdown Club of Washington, it was announced last night by Secretary Jim Magner. Simmons, formerly of Texas University, will serve a one-year term. He has been serving as vice president and replaces Admiral Emory S. Land, as head of the club.

Don Adams of Maryland U., was elected vice president, and Magner of North Carolina, secretary-treasurer.

Five members were picked to serve two-year terms on the board of governors. They are J. Kip Edwards, Stevens; Joe Escude, Penn; Ralph Espy, Hobart; Comdr. E. J. Spaulding, Syracuse; Comdr. Frank Wickhorst, Navy, and L. P. Walsh, Minn.

Finishing out their terms on the board, with one year more to go, are W. J. DeButts, Virginia; H. P. Flynn, C. U.; Hon. I. M. Foster, Ohio U.; S. J. Glass, Lehigh; O. D. Hollenbeck, Colgate; G. P. Marshall; James O'Conner 'Roberts, Georgetown.

All past presidents are also members of the board—Arthur (Dutch) Bergman, Max Farrington, Ralph D. Pittman, Land, L. W. Thomas, jr., G. R. Fenwick, John McGovern, and B. L. Eberts.

Bosox Split Double Bill With Indians

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 23.—Boston and Cleveland divided a double-header today before a slim crowd with the Red Sox punching out a 13-to-7 win in the first game and the Indians hammering out a 15-hit 6-to-4 win in the second game.

Ford Garrison, Sox rookie outfielder, had a field day in the first game with a homer, double and two singles to drive in four runs.

The Federal Diary

KLUTTZ

The Navy is conducting a joint recruiting drive with the Civil Service Commission in 36 States for new employes to take jobs here. It needs between 3500 and 3700 new employes by the end of the year to fill new jobs, replace people who resign, and to fill the jobs of 1000 officers and enlisted men who are scheduled to be shifted to combat assignments. And its chances of filling its civilian needs are exceedingly slim. Washington has suffered from too much adverse publicity and people on the outside have an exaggerated idea of what actually goes on here.

To counteract Washington's bad reputation, the Navy is doing a personalized recruiting job in the 36 States. Prospects are interviewed and appeals made to their patriotism. Families of the prospects are visited. Housing is guaranteed the recruits. Girls are provided rooms in Government dormitories for 30 days and those who like dormitory life can remain on. No attempt is made to glamorize the city or the department. The prospects are told the plain facts of wartime Washington and the department is doing what it can to make their life here a bit more comfortable.

Navy now has 19,600 civilians here. It has had about the same number for months. Despite its recruitment campaign, about as many people leave each month as are recruited. It has been expected to fill a number of the vacancies with WAVES but they, too, protest at being transferred here. Some of the girls, it's reported, refuse to join the WAVES if there's any chance of being sent here. (Our local Chamber of Commerce should take note of our black eye.) Moreover, Navy employes, like their colleagues in War Production Board and other war agencies, have suffered from overconfidence, and when the war news is good they think about hitting for the home trail and many of them do.

Dr. Frederick C. Smith, War Department medical director, reports many accidents befall War employes because they wear improper shoes . . . The Senate Civil Service Committee won't hold a meeting scheduled for today to discuss the Board of Legal Examiners. Senator Mead of New York is out of the city and his vote on the bill to continue the board is expected to settle the issue . . . Bureau of Standards has opening for scientific and mechanical trainees at $1752 a year. Apply at Civil Service . . . The personnel society will hear Dr. Donald Davenport of the Bureau of Labor Statistics on Thursday, September 30, at the YWCA . . . The girls at Quartermaster have a new club. It's called the Quartermaster Corps-Eds. They're forming glee and dramatic clubs. Last night the club entertained the Quartermaster boys at the Back the Attack show.

The exodus from the Office of Civilian Defense has been slowed down. John B. Martin, acting director, has spoken to his employes as a group and many of them individually in an effort to convince them that the OCD work will continue. Since July 1 the number of employes has dropped from 1100 to less than 700 and the employes have been bombarded with reports that the agency would be abolished. From here on out OCD will lay greater emphasis on local disasters such as fires, train wrecks, floods and safety measures in war plants and less on blackouts and some of its other activities.

The Government employe draft bugaboo is still with us and will continue to be for some time yet. Representative Harness of Indiana told the Costello Committee yesterday that 300,000 single and married men of draft age were on the Federal payroll. But he didn't say how many were 4-F's or otherwise had been rejected for military service. Representative Costello of California introduced a bill which would bar men from Federal service who had been rejected by the armed forces for mental deficiencies. Costello believes if a man isn't mentally fit for the Army he shouldn't be in the Federal civilian service.

Robert Barnett, chairman of the Government's deferment committee, testified that Secretary Ickes had protested to the President because his committee refused to okay deferments of all the Interior employes he recommended. Col. Edward A. Fitzpatrick, a member of his committee, said the Interior Department had made no real effort to convert its activities to the war. He said the department had asked for the deferment of 6000 employes. Costello said it may be necessary to cut deeply the appropriations of nonwar agencies to force them to cut off some of their employes . . . The resignation of Prentiss Brown as OPA administrator, insiders say, would be made official if the White House bosses were certain Chester Bowles, the general manager, is the right man for the job . . . National Housing has reached 122 per cent of its war bond quota, the best record of any large agency. Its quota was $165,000 and the employes have subscribed $205,000.

6 D. C. Mothers Elated at Army Supply System

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

Six Washington mothers, whose sons and daughters are serving with the armed forces overseas, yesterday "took over" the Quartermaster Corps exhibit at the "Back the Attack" grounds.

They came—a little nervously, a little apprehensively at the hugeness and complexity of the array before them—to learn how the Army equips, feeds, clothes and maintains their boys and girls, far from home and "with all those Japs and Nazis buzzing around," as one of them put it.

Mrs. Frederick Wildensteiner, 1712 25th st. se., a small, comfortable woman, whose son, Sergt. John G. Wildensteiner, is now in New Guinea, immediately fastened her attention on the display of dehydrated vegetables, meats, fruits and cereals.

"Oh, my boy's fond of food," she said a little worriedly. "Do you think this really tastes good?"

The Sergeant Complies

The sergeant behind the display stand grinned.

"Wanna see what it looks like cooked?" he asked unnecessarily.

At once the entire bevy of mothers crowded forward eagerly:

Mrs. Richard J. Gray, Postoffice Box 23, Ashton, Md., whose twin daughters, First Lieut. Elizabeth Gray and Second Lieut. Helen Gray, are Army nurses, one in New Guinea and the other in Iceland, and whose son, Cornelius, is a naval lieutenant j. g. in Iceland; Mrs. Agnes Rose, 1333 U. st. se., whose son, Corpl. Edward Rose, may be in Italy now, but was in Sicily when his mother last heard from him; Mrs. Eva May Gill, 636 Ninth st. ne., whose fourth son expects to be in the Army next month, while the three now overseas are Corpl. Ralph Gill in Sicily, Pfc. Wesley Gill in Algiers, and Corpl. Milton Gill in England, and Mrs. William Bosley, 816 G st. ne., whose son, Sergt. Charles A. Bosley, is in military police at an airfield in England.

The sixth mother was Mrs. Emily Drew, 1217 Good Hope rd. se., who is chief clerk of Draft Board No. 24.

Mrs. Drew was a little tenser than her five companions. She alone of the group had no idea of the whereabouts of her 20-year-old son, Pfc. William Drew, except that he is "overseas, in some theater of action."

"Just Unbelievable"

But she added proudly that her daughter is a pharmacist's mate with the WAVES in California.

After sniffing and examining the food rehydrated and cooked before their eyes, the mothers turned about delightedly.

"It's just unbelievable, it smells that good," they declared.

Army cots, uniforms, toothbrushes, kitchenware, came in for expert examination. Eyes were critical, but results apparently were thoroughly satisfactory.

"I just know the Army takes such good care of my boy," Mrs. Bosley said, "but it's nice to see the things they get. Makes you feel so much better."

Chosen from a list submitted by District Headquarters of Selective Service, the six mothers met at the District Building at 12:30, and got their first rides in Army jeeps to the "Back the Attack" grounds.

A Dazzling Exhibit

At the entrance to the "Fighting Quartermasters" they were met and officially welcomed by Brigadier General H. A. Barnes, deputy quartermaster general. An escort led by Colonel H. Feldman, in charge of the Quartermaster exhibit, toured them through the grounds on which were set rolling kitchens, mobile laundries and sales commissaries, shoe and textile repair shops on wheels, and the huge miscellany of equipment which helps keep the army going.

They were average women and homemakers. They had known only that their sons and daughters were gone, fighting on all the scattered fronts of a global war.

They had never before seen or comprehended the vast organization which cares for those sons and daughters under difficult battle conditions.

You're terribly kind to take so much time with us," Mrs. Wildensteiner told the colonel. Her voice wavered.

"I'll write my boys all about this. I guess they're not the only ones in this family who've ridden in a jeep," she smiled very gaily.

At 2:15 p. m., the group was bundled off to attend their first broadcast, over Station WWDC, and later to view the spectacular Army War Show at the arena.

There were at least 12 damp eyes around—spectators not being altogether indifferent to mothers and soldiers and things.

the territory of the enemy. Our men are trained and are resolved to do their full part, to the sacrifice of life itself. . . . The Army will not fail in skill and courage.

"Your purchases of War Bonds must keep the weapons in the hands of our soldiers," he concluded, "to make that skill and courage count."

Elmer Davis, OWI director, and his wife and daughter were on the stage during the performance. Maj. Gen. Norman P. Kirk, Surgeon General of the Armyw as reviewing officer at the start of the show.

Indian summer skies yesterday, and at night a waning moon that held water, favored 80,000 visitors to the Army's record-smashing "Back the Attack" exposition which on the fifteenth day had an attendance mark far in advance of a million and a quarter persons.

Attendance 1,377,000

The over-all attendance announced by Maj. Gen. John Galloway, the show's public relations officer, was 1,377,000.

Sponsored by The Washington Post, the magnificent presentation of the Army's might—planes, tanks, guns and qualified personnel—was put on at the request of the Treasury Department in connection with the Third War Loan Drive.

The record attendance, thus far, was Sunday, September 12—fourth day of the show—when 195,000 persons massed onto the Washington Monument Grounds to enjoy the hundreds of exhibits of fighting equipment and the two action shows, afternoon and evening.

"The final attendance mark will go far past the million and a half," Lieut. Col. Frank T. McCabe, the officer in charge, predicted.

The daily attendance thus far, with three more days to be heard from, is:

September 9	65,000
September 10	57,000
September 11	95,000
September 12	195,000
September 13	109,000

September 18	95,000
September 19	165,000
September 20	15,000
September 21	13,000
September 22	55,000
September 23	80,000
Total to date	1,377,000

Horror in Camp

A rapt audience at the afternoon performance heard Gwen Dew graphically tell of the stark horror she encounteredy as a prisoner of the Japs for six months following the fall of Hong Kong.

Of her confinement in the notorious Stanley Prison concentration camp, Miss Dew, a correspondent for Newsweek and the Detroit News, said:

"There were 3500 British, Dutch and Americans dumped into this camp . . . Most of us slept on the floor. We ate out of tin cans picked up from garbage heaps. There was no medicine, no clothes sent us. We made shoes from unraveled gunny sacks, shorts from odd pieces of cloth.

"In the house I lived in, there was no piece of furniture . . . It was infested with scorpions, malaria, mosquitoes, black spiders and cockroaches.

"Forty per cent of the camp had beri-beri, scurvy and pellegra. Everyone lost from 25 to 100 pounds. At 10 in the morning we got a bowl of rotten, wormy coolie rice with a cup of thin gravy. At 5 we had another bowl of rice and a cup of stew made of fish heads and buffalo meat . . .

Miss Dew, although exchanged for Japanese prisoners weeks ago, is still undergoing treatment for malnutrition.

Japs Have Vast Empire

"We left Japan," she continued, an area the size of Montana, which in a few short months became the second largest empire in the world, probably the richest the world has ever known. She has taken control of 500,000,000 people she can and is using as slave labor.

"She has taken 1,000,000 square miles of territory, and in 18 months of fighting we have taken back only 200 square miles.

"We've got a long, tough fight ahead of us. We're up against madmen who believe they are going to rule the world, and they don't care if it takes 100 years to do it.

"No sacrifice is too great for them. Bombing won't stop them. We've got to attack them from every direction, fight them with every force. . . . Let there never be another day in American history when our fighting men will be without guns to fire, ships to sail, and planes to fly—

"These fighting men of ours can't come home to make them. They can't come home to pay for them."

A Torch of History

She told of the 150,000 white prisoners left behind in the Orient.

"They, too," she said, "wait for the day when we will free them again from the blood-stained, murdering hands of the Japanese. It is our task to see that all this is accomplished if we want to go on in a world where there is freedom, justice and equality for all——.

"That is the torch history has handed you."

Miss Dew is appearing in Washington in connection with the motion picture, "Behind the Rising Sun," written by James R. Young, himself a writer and former Jap prisoner. She, herself, is author of a best seller, "Prisoner of the Japs." And oddly enough in Washington she met up with Lois Fearon, whom she had known in China and who also was a prisoner of the Japanese and a British nurse at the time of her capture. She was an inmate of Stanley Prison with Miss Dew.

Miss Fearon i now a member of the Canadian Women's Auxiliary Corps on duty in Washington.

Preceding Miss Dew, Representative Randolph (Democrat), of the House District Committee, spoke in behalf of the Third War Loan drive.

Thousands at the afternoon performance waited on the grounds to witness the changing of the White House Military Police Guard and the splendid Medical Department arena show immediately following.

Free Nylons Boost Sales In War Loan

Women Throng To Get Hose With $500 Bonds; Big Show Planned

Free nylon stockings with purchase of every $500 bond that proved so successful curb service had to be inaugurated, the further massing of Italians be· behind the effort, and announcement that Lieut. Rudy Vallee and his Coast Guard Band will appear here October 4 featured yesterday in the Third War Loan drive that has sold slightly more than 60 millions, or about 64 per cent of the 94 million quota.

M. Ravitz, manager of the Maryland Bootery, 1344 F st. nw., decided to give away the several hundred pairs of nylon hose in the store's stock. The "price" was set at one $500 bond per pair. The store, an accredited Treasury Department bond issuing agent, no sooner began the task than it was found necessary to set up "curb service," Ravitz said. The store sold more than $60,000 in bonds up to late yesterday. Women, the proprietor said, jammed the store with their husbands.

Italian War Loan Rally

The Italian American Victory Council, constituting all of the societies and clubs of the metropolitan and Washington area, will hold a huge war loan rally Sunday at the Fiumedinisi Club from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

A special musical program has been arranged, according to Ralph Cipriano, chairman of the affair.

Lieutenant Vallee, himself in the service, will appear at a "Stars at Midnight" show being arranged as a finale for the drive, it was announced by John J. Payette and Carter T. Barron, cochairmen of the D.C. activities committee of the motion picture industry.

The show is scheduled for the night of October 4. It will be a combined affair presenting talent from the Earl and Capitol Theaters, and will be one of the most lavish ever staged here, the cochairmen promised.

Admission will be by the purchase of bonds only.

On Program of Big Show

Final arrangements are being made by Harry Anger and Gene Ford, managers of the Earl and Capitol, respectively. With Vallee on the program will be Jimmie Grier, bandmaster; the Flying Coast Guard Cutters; Box Maxwell, harpist; Dave Wade, Andy Secrest, formerly with Paul Whiteman and his trumpet; King Jackson, who before his enlistment was with Spike Jones and His City Slickers.

Both theaters will present the show and "admission" may be secured through any of the theaters through September 30.

All liquor stores will be closed after 6 p. m. Monday, not because of a shortage of liquor, but because the liquor industry is going to dig deeper in the interest of the Third war Loan.

Every member of the industry here will attend a bond rally Monday night at the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium. The guest speaker will be W. W. Wachtel, national chairman of the War Stamp Council, Liquor and Wine Industries, who will be introduced by Manuel J. Davis, who will preside. J. D. Spain is District chairman for the industry's committee.

Largest Reported Sale

The largest sale reported here yesterday was that made to the International Business Machine Corp. and was for $100,000. Louis H. LaMotte, IMB official, made the purchase from Master Sergt. Celia Merrill, leader of the WAC Band at the "Back the Attack" show.

"Yankee Boy," an Army carrier pigeon, carried the report of the sale away to the show loft. Attaining a wide circle over the downtown section, the bird suddenly darted direct to the loft and within a few seconds the sale was recorded.

Frank W. Lee, chairman of the labor division of the Third War Loan, reported the following bond purchases by labor organizations here since the beginning of the campaign:

Building Local No. 74, $50,000; Progressive Beneficial Association, $20,000; International Union of Operating Engineers Local No. 77, $45,000; International Association of Firefighters, $2000; Carpenters' Local No. 132, $10,000; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, $200,000; Bakery Salesmen, Local No. 33, $5000; Amalgamated Meat Cutters Local No. 393, $1000; Amalgamated Meat Cutters Local No. 55, $2000; Union Label Trades Department, AFL, $4000; Elevator Constructors Local No. 10, $1000.

Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance, No. 781, $8000; Bakers Auxiliary, No. 118, $3000; International Heat, Frost and Asbestos Workers, $3000; Musicians Protective Union, Local No. 161, $5000; Retail Clerks, No. 639, $7000; Brewery Workers, Local No. 648, $1000; AFL, $50,000; International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union, $1,250,000; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, $1,100,000; Pattern Makers League, $40,000; International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, $75,000; International Association of Machinists, $500,000.

National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, $3000; Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes, Local No. 246, $5000; Laborers Union, No. 74, $50,000; Electrical Workers, Local No. 26, $20,000; Plasterers and Cement Finishers, Local No. 96, $30,000; Cigar Makers International Union, $5000; American Federation of Government Employes, $6000; United Association of Plumbers and Steam Fitters, $400,000; Carpenters Union, Local No. 1590, $8000.

Carpenters District Council, $10,000; Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union, $500,000; International Union of Operating Engineers, $50,000; Bricklayers Union, Local No. 1, $5000.

Carrier Pigeons Will Perform at Noon

The Army carrier pigeons that have been attracting large crowds throughout the city, and which display an uncanny ability to fly direct to their lofts at the "Back the Attack" show when released carrying messages of additional sales of bonds, will be on exhibition today.

Their guardians will show the birds, beginning at noon, in front of the OPA cafeteria on Independence ave., between 6th and 7th sts. sw. The pigeons will be kept there as long as bond buyers wish, the Army said, after which the pigeons in their jeep will stop at various points about the city during the rest of the day.

WACS Display Versatility At 'Back the Attack' Show

What do WAC's do—aside from toting box-caps and patiently saluting every uniformed male with metal on his collar?

Just about everything the Army can think of—short of firing cannon and digging foxholes—a visit to their "Back the Attack" exhibits yesterday proved.

There are ten such exhibits, manned by female soldiers from training centers, proving grounds, flying fields, arsenals and Army bands. And even the most seasoned, woman-shy sergeant of prewar vintage has had to admit their versatility and adaptability.

From field stripping an M-1 rifle to serving doughnuts and coffee to colonels and similar big shots, the Army gals have pretty well established the fact that hardly another single branch of the Army at the "Back the Attack" show plays so varied a role.

At the ordnance exhibit, where WAC demonstrate blindfold fieldstripping of M-1 rifles and carbines before the critical eyes of experts and amateurs, almost all WACs there had previously been stock and shipping clerks at the Aberdeen Proving Ground. They learned their new skills in no time flat during the early days of the show.

Innate Adaptability

This kind of innate adaptability is personified in Pvt. Barbara Lauwers, who can be found daily at the WAC exhibit, describing WAC basic training to civilian audiences.

Private Lauwers holds a doctorate in law from Czechoslovakia, her native country. She left it only two years ago, a victim of the Nazi invader.

So perhaps she has a special reason for her immense enthusiasm and Army service for the democracy which gave her a home. But her fellow WACS agree that "darned few gals we know" could achieve a position in Army public relations only two years after they entered a strange country, speaking a foreign tongue.

Uniformed Beauties

The uniformed beauties who model WAC uniforms at "Back the Attack" offer another example of the miscellaneous duties performed by these girls at their posts:

Corpl. Rebecca Fuller, an attractive blonde, is an instructor in the Motor Transport Training School in Daytona Beach, Fla. Her associate models all hail from Daytona Beach, but their specialties are as varied as their uniforms.

Clad for the exhibit in the dress of Army nurses—in arctic and tropical regions, winter uniforms, fatigue cloths, etc., the models turn out to be: a member of the Life Guard Corps, like First Sergt. Anna H. Depriest; a technician fifth grade, like Corpl. Evelyn Bernhoester; in public relations, as is Pvt. Tillamae Hendel, and half a dozen other things, from Army map drafting to Signal Corps work.

The WAC Band from Daytona Beach has attracted wide attention since it arrived at the grounds. Under the expert direction of Sergt. Celia Merrill, it will wind up its stay in Washington, September 27 and leave for New York City where it will play in two concerts in each of that city's five boroughs.

Rep. Randolph Challenges D.C. To Lead 3d Loan Bond Buying

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday "challenged the citizens of the Nation's Capital to assume the role of leadership in the Third War Loan Bond drive.

He spoke before the 31,000 visitors at the afternoon arena show of "Back the Attack" on the Washington Monument Grounds.

Representative Randolph pointed out that the audienc ehad just witnessed in the arena a stirring spectacle of the mechanized might of the American war machine, which indicated that the equipment had been built with intelligence and skill, and was being used against ruthless and relentless foes.

"Across the production lines," he explained, "skill and intelligence had been used, to which was added a third ingredient—courage.

"We on the home front must add another ingredient yet—that of loyalty—which can best be shown by increased purchases of war bonds."

The war is being won on wheels and wings, Representative Randolph said, asserting that the tremendous cost of the war was due to its global aspect and mechanization.

"In the Napoleonic wars," he said, "it costs $300 to kill a soldier; in the Civil War, $5000; in the World War I, $45,000. Today it costs $100,000—the reason it is necessary for the billions of dollars for equipment.

"I do not make an appeal to Washingtonians—but give a challenge for them to go forward in the role of leadership in the nerve center of the Nation in the purchase of war bonds."

Cafe Code Seen as Step Backward

Rigid Regulation Could Be Changed By Congress Alone, Ruhland Asserts

Health Department and District officials yesterday told a subcommittee of the Senate District Committee that they consider the proposed bill providing a restaurant sanitation code "a backward step" in keeping local eating establishments clean. The hearing will continue Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, declared that "anything as rigid as an act of Congress would be a handicap rather than an asset." If the bill proposed by Chairman McCarran becomes a statute, it was pointed out, any changes would have to be referred back to Congress for action.

Make Surprise Visits

The existing control of restaurants is a sanitation code handled by the Health Department, in which 10 inspectors make surprise visits to eating places, mark them for various points of cleanliness, and record scores.

Commissioner Guy Mason told members of the subcommittee, headed by Senator Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana that no inspections whatsoever are made of restaurants operated on Federal property and that "they run inspectors off if they attempt to investigate." The restaurants in the Capital are inspected only on invitation from David Lynn, Capitol architect, he said.

Almost Verbatim Copy

Vernon E. West, assistant corporation counsel for the District, declared that the measure would be "a step backward" on the grounds that it is "almost a verbatim copy" of the present sanitary code, except for the provision regarding grading of restaurants.

Similar sentiments were expressed by Dr. Reid Ashworth, director of the bureau of food inspection for the Health Department.

Army Show Aide 'Costar' For Wedding

Second Lieut. Joseph A. Hurney, jr., will take time out tomorrow from his supervision of the gas supply section of the Quartermaster exhibit at the "Back the Attack" show.

The reason—even his commanding officers agree—is about as important as any reason for time off in the Army.

He's going to be married, of course.

At 10 a. m. tomorrow, at St. Anthony's Church, 12th and Monroe sts. nw., Miss Eloise M. Haley, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Haley of 807 Taylor st. ne., will become his bride.

Lieutenant Hurney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Hurney, sr., 2701 4th st. ne., served six months in England at a gasoline supply base before returning to the United States for training at the Quartermaster school at Camp Lee. Shortly after he was commissioned in May this year, Hurney was assigned to his present post with the First Quartermaster Demonstration Battalion, commanded by Lieut. Col Arthur H. Arenz.

Before his induction in April 1941, Hurney managed a building supply warehouse in Rosslyn, Va., for the Griffith Consumer Co.

City News In Brief

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Come Sunday, the Washington Alumnae Club of Zeta Tau Alpha Fraternity will hold open house for incoming freshmen and new students (girls), 7 to 9 p. m., at Columbian House, George Washington University campus.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Mrs. Edgar Withrow, national first vice president, will be on hand to welcome the rushees and guests. Receiving with her will be Mrs. Edward Wanner, Alpha Province president; Miss Dorothy Rock, president of the Washington Alumnae Club; Mrs. Leighton Reed, delegate to the City Pan-Hellenic Association; Judge Ellen K. Raedy, District of Columbia Municipal Court; Miss Betsey Hunt, alumnae rush adviser; Miss Virginia Jones, president of Beta Alpha Chapter at G. W. U., and Miss Edith Davis, Beta Alpha rush chairman.

Founded at Virginia State College, Farmville, Va., by nine patriotic Virginia-born women, Zeta Tau Alpha International Fraternity is one of the pioneer Southern groups to bear a Greek name. It was the first women's fraternity to be chartered by a special act of legislature in the Old Dominion State. Since then charters have been granted to 79 college chapters in the United States and Canada. There are approximately 100 alumnae groups with membership numbering over 18,000.

Aim of the fraternity was service. It has been and still is carrying on a civic-philanthropic project—health and education center in the Virginia mountains. There are numerous national and local scholarship funds to assist girls through college.

To further their aim of service, Z. T. A. members are buying War Bonds liberally. Alumnae dues have been made payable in stamps. Even the birthday pennies contributed annually on Founders' Day, October 15, now have been supplanted by 50-cent war stamps.

Also you will find members of the sorority serving in the women's armed forces, donating blood and doing other war work.

Packard; bulletin, Miss Blanche Crapo; Junior Guild, Dr. Margaret Miller.

All Behind Drive

Organized clubwomen of America will back the All-States WAC Recruiting Campaign through a plan of cooperation between every community in the Nation and the advisory council of the women's interests section, Bureau of Public Relations, the War Department announced today.

The advisory council, made up of the presidents of 36 national organized women's groups, in resolution adopted recently at the First WAC Training Center, Fort Des Moines, Iowa, urged support by all women's organizations of the drive for increased membership in the WAC to replace soldiers now in noncombatant jobs. The All-States recruiting campaign will open September 27 and will continue through December 7.

Membership of all local units of the 36 women's organizations will be available for service with State Governors and Commissioners of the District of Columbia, who have been called upon by the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. George C. Marshall, to direct the All-States Recruiting Campaign within their borders. The Governors and Commissioners were asked to recruit women volunteers to equal the total battle casualties of the Army to date.

Participation of the advisory council in the All-States Recruiting Campaign is in the nature of a second anniversary observance. The council was organized by the women's interests section in October, 1941, as a medium of telling the women of the Nation about the Army. During the past two years it has become oriented to the Army through meetings in each of the nine Army Service Commands and its constant contact with the women's interests section.

Crackers Give Crunchy Texture To Soft Diet

Americans include crackers in their meals, just as the Chinese eat nuts to provide a crunchy element in their diets. The menu of the ideal meal should include both soft and hard foods, as well as distinctively different flavors. Since most of our foods are soft, crackers lend themselves perfectly to provide a contrast in texture, besides adding flavor.

Long years ago, when a baby was teething, he was given a piece of bacon rind on which to chew. While the basic idea is sound, the up-to-the-minute mother would never dream of giving her child anything like that. Instead, she gives the baby a cracker or piece of zwieback.

Crackers are firm enough to satisfy the child's desire to chew when his gums are swollen. And they are healthful, as well. Moreover, since crackers and biscuits are conveniently packaged and most homemakers keep them on hand as a staple food, young mothers need not make any special preparation for the youngster.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Bride, 17, Finds Herself An Unloved Intruder In Her Husband's Family Circle, After Her Mother Urged And Engineered Wedding, Against His Wish

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Since coming to Washington, I have read your column every day; and now that I am at my wits' end, concerning a problem of my own, I feel compelled to ask your advice. I met a good looking, fine mannered young Army man in my Southern home town, just before he sailed overseas. It seemed to us to be love at first sight. We had two dates before he sailed, and we thought we were madly in love. My mother met him the night I did; my father never did meet him;—and then suddenly he sailed We wrote each other very often,—ardent love letters. He sent me a watch and an engagement ring, and we planned to be married as soon as he returned.

Then he became ill and was hospitalized for six months. When he was discharged and returned to his home, I insisted we get married at once. My parents were all for it; but his mother tried to reason us out of it. She said her son was a sick boy, had practically no money saved up, and must become rehabilitated. She suggested that I come to Washington (where they lived) to get better acquainted with the man I wanted to marry, and also to view my prospective home. However, my mother would not consent to this plan and the boy was too ill to make the long trip to see me. Well, we kept on writing; but his letters began to slow down, and once he even wrote me to go out with other boys, as he was not ready for marriage yet.

I worried and became ill; and mother wrote him about me, urging him to keep his promise, and finally he did come to my home and we were married. I returned with him to his home here, and his parents received me very sweetly and have been lovely to me. But within three weeks after we were married, he told me we were not suited to each other, and that he felt we should separate and I should return home. I am 17 and he is 20. His parents had thought we were entirely too young to marry; but my parents didn't,—and so here I am. I am still living with his family, but he ignores me, and I must move.

I don't want to go home; my folks wouldn't understand; and the humiliation of facing my friends, five weeks after they saw me so happy on my wedding day, is more than I can endure. I have a job here in Washington, and believe I would like to get a room and stay on here, for the time being, at least. Then perhaps my husband may regain his equilibrium and want me back; but the chance is vague. My in-laws will do anything for me, and they do not condone his actions. He tells his mother we just aren't suited to each other and that he doesn't love me. I do love him, but I realize now that his mother was right;—that we did not know each other before marriage. Yet I am his wife, and I don't know what to do. My parents will feel that I, too, am to blame,—because he was so nice when we were married that they just won't believe he has changed so much in this short time. Miss Haworth, what shall I do?

S. V. R.

Take Immediate Steps To Correct The Mistake

DEAR S. V. R.: There is no use crying over spilt milk, of course. The task before you now is to undo the mistake you "insisted" upon making. The history of humanity's trial-and-error struggle toward universal enlightenment and individual worth of character shows, among other things, that foolish mistakes can be invitations,—or stepping stones,—to rapid growth, in wisdom and reinforced strength of character; that there is not necessarily anything permanently self-damning about having innocently made painful mistakes. A mistake of the kind you have made could become a serious handicap to your future development into a fine and happy woman, ONLY if you failed to go into action immediately to correct it, after having seen so soon and so clearly that it IS a mistake that can never be made to work.

And lest you tend to blame yourself too much for what has happened, and thus lose faith in your latent ability to manage your life more wisely in the months and years ahead,—and so that you will not feel too miserably ashamed and on the defensive before your parents, when letting them know that the rushed-through wedding was a completely wrong move,—I want to say (before entering into a discussion of how best to clear up the mistake) that your mother appears to have been at least as much, and indeed perhaps more, to blame for the wretched blunder than you were. Your mother-in-law, on the other hand, appears to be an extraordinarily sane, sensible and civilized woman,—whose far seeing, high minded efforts to keep you two youngsters from making this bitter mistake deserved cooperation-in-kind from your mother which, obviously, she declined to give.

Match-Making Mother Deserves Most Censure

It seems that your mother, in an excess of blindly selfish zeal to attain an objective greatly desired by her,—namely, the objective of marrying you off to a likely young man,—deliberately chose to ignore and override the other woman's wise attempts to promote a careful, mutually considerate and intelligently united preliminary exploration of the advisability of the projected match; and proceeded, rather, to throw her weight in the direction of railroading the young man into the marriage, without regard for his feelings, or his parents' proper misgivings (not to mention their pocketbook), or the future effects upon yourself, of being practically forced on the boy as his unwanted wife, and upon his parents as an object of charity. With the result that if anybody owes anybody an apology here,—it is your mother who owes it: firstly, to the boy's parents, for having urged and engineered a course of action theoretically to assuage her daughter's heartache, which has added so greatly to their burden of rehabilitating their war-invalided son; secondly, to the boy, for having high-pressured him, in his tremulous sick confusion of mind, into marrying you when he knew he didn't love you, because SHE maintained it was the decent thing for him to do; and, thirdly, to you, for having pushed you so vigorously out of the frying pan into the fire.

So much for that angle of the past. But bear it in mind when informing your mother that the marriage has gone on the rocks and can't be restored. Don't skulk before her as if you felt you were wholly and shamefully responsible for your humiliating status as detested bride. Now, as to how to redeem your self-respect: since you have a job here, and cannot endure the prospect of going back home just now to run the gauntlet of your friends' commiserating curiosity, I think you could make no better emergency move than to "get a room and stay on here," at least for the time being, as you yourself have suggested. Certainly the first step upward toward reclaimed self-respect must consist in taking yourself off your long-suffering in-laws' hands, and in giving your husband a sense of release from his cornered plight, which currently puts him in the ignominious position of helplessly imposing a double drain on his parents' bounty. And there is a possibility,—though "vague," as you say,—that when he sees you bravely charting a course of chin-up self-sufficiency, and finds himself free of your society, he will begin to see you in a different, and admirably gallant, and more lovable light.

Man's Change of Heart Marked Return to Reason

However, I must warn, this (if it happens) would not be a case of his having "regained his equilibrium." It would be, rather, a case of his learning to love you realistically, for your maturing promise of fine character and independent personality. His equilibrium was not lost during the second phase of the courtship, as you erroneously think,—but at the very first, when under the pressure of complicated war-born tensions, he plunged headlong into premature talk of marriage. During his long convalescence, his emotional equilibrium was gradually restored,—so that by the time he was invalided home, he had come to appraise his initial enthusiasm for you at its counterfeit worth. But back, in conclusion, to your future course: If you find, eventually, that you cannot make out successfully here on your own power here,—say, after giving the undertaking a six-months' trial,—(and it would be something of a miracle if you could, at your tender age), then by all means go home, to take shelter under your parents' wing while arranging a legal dissolution of the marriage. And when you face your friends once more, don't feel that you owe them a fulsome explanation for your return. Least said, soonest mended; and the greater your reserve on the subject, the more respect will you command.

Memo to Miss Brown

SUBJECT:

On Becoming Well-Informed

Perhaps you fancy yourself the center of admiring eyes at dinner, dishing out information right and left on Hegel's philosophy, and how Bulgaria's government is organized and why Dehn's water colors don't compare with Winslow Homer's. Or maybe you're just tired of hearing people talk about things and people and ideas you've never heard of—much less established an opinion about. In either case, you've probably arrived at the point of wanting to do something about all of the things you don't know. The more we learn (this is old stuff, of course) the more we realize our shortcomings in the knowledge line, so it's really a sign of mental superiority, not of ignorance, to yearn for information.

From both the pride and the personal satisfaction angles, it's good to have curiosity and to try to satisfy it (never succeed entirely, or the thrill will be gone). From the point of view of our own individual and collective futures, it's pretty necessary that we know whereof we speak—since we'll no doubt have plenty of chances to put in our 5 cents worth, democracy functioning as it does.

There are a lot of ways to get information—formal and informal. It's almost as satisfactory to find a well-informed friend or group of them as it is to learn in a classroom, but dangerous, since he or they may become bored with us while we struggle to catch up. So for a real head start, let's look over the basic, informative courses which are available.

The Central Y. W. C. A. (17th and K) is planning a fall course—actually just a series of forum discussions with people who know—called "Reconstruction Now," dedicated to the proposition that Government girls want to find out what's being done in the way of national and international postwar planning.

American University night school has several courses in Human Living—from different points of view—which, although they're college freshmen courses, are something of an education in themselves. There's Human Living: the Social Sciences, for instance, which gives more than a little thought to sociology, political science, economics and psychology. This course is planned to aid an individual to understand himself and his world, which just about takes care of everything. The class meets Wednesdays, 6:10 to 8:20 p. m. Then there's Human Living: the Humanities, which delves into literature, art and music in the first semester and philosophy, religion and education in the second. This is not such superficial stuff as the "contents" would suggest—it's not so much appreciation of culture as such, but an investigation of how culture fits into modern society.

George Washington University will offer a sort of fundamental course called "Organization of Society," which should provide a springboard for your private digging into society's problems. George Washington's Introductory Economics course should provide the same sort of foundation for your seeking out of economic facts and ideas. If it's historical background you crave, try the courses in the development of European history or the development of American history. A good knowledge of history is like a score card—you can't recognize today's players or the game, either) unless you know who played what yesterday.

For the best all-round picture we know of, try the Department of Agriculture School's course in World Politics ($14 for the semester.) This class meets Tuesdays from 6 to 8 and starts with the origins of World War I. After showing how and why Hitler, Mussolini and Communist Russia came into existence, the course comes right up to the minute in World War II. The Far East and South America come in for their share of the spotlight, too.

All of the courses we've mentioned are, of course, pretty rapid going, considering the territory they cover. Almost like the man who gave a lecture on the history of the world in nine minutes. So don't expect to know everything about everything—even though the professors dish out the high spots in rapid succession. The best a professor can do is show the way—and if you keep your notebook in hand you should be able to get more than a few suggestions on where you can go for more information, all by yourself.

The Gentler Sex

By Malcina Lindsay

Man Among Women

Butchers and their women customers who were particularly chummy in prewar days (remember the popular butcher who knew all his customers' names or at least called them "Miss" until they were 90?) now have a feud on. In New York it is particularly acute. In Washington, the participants, though a little more guarded in speech, admit definite strained relations. Here is what each has to say:

THE WOMEN'S SIDE

The butcher who used to be such a jolly good fellow, now has become an old grouch. He has such a high and mighty, leave it or take it attitude that the customer feels like a worm.

He plays favorites—saves back legs of lamb and other choice treasures for certain customers and displays nothing but hearts, kidneys and similar weird cuts in his showcase.

He turns his back and gets busy doing nothing when customers who have irked him in the past by their legitimate questions approach.

He is too impatient with questions, and tries to hurry the poor confused women who are are trying to get the most value for their points.

He is susceptible to soft soap—to the customers who play up to him.

He only looks bored when a perplexed housewife asks for advice as to whether the hogs' liver or the scrapple is the best buy.

He is unnecessarily vague about his wares. When asked when his meat will be in, he replies nonchalantly, "Oh any time between 10 and 5," or else, "I don't know," or "I couldn't tell you."

When there is no card system he takes aggressive or attractive customers out of their turns and lets the mousey women get lost in the shuffle.

He doesn't remember names any more or have a cheery greeting, and gives the general impression of being a woman hater.

THE BUTCHER'S SIDE

Women are difficult to deal with at best, and under war and rationing pressure they have become irritable, excitable and more fussy than usual.

They won't play fair at the counter. Even when there are cards and numbers they will try to get waited on ahead of turn er get someone to trade numbers with them under guise of being in a hurry.

They are too emotional. They will shriek and even weep when they can't get what they want (and company is coming) or when there is nothing left but something "hubby" won't touch.

They hold up lines by their indecision and confusion.

They don't plan their buying before they leave home and dillydally at the counter trying to decide what to take in lieu of the pork roast they were counting on.

They try to make the butcher the recipient of all their rationing problems when he has enough problems of his own, due to lack of assistants, delivery boys, etc., as well as lack of meat.

They all come at the same time and want to be served at the same time and get fussy if they have to wait.

THE EXCEPTIONS

There you have the prosecution and defense. Perhaps the butcher these days is in a position to appreciate Confucius' advice, "Never have dealings with little fellows and with women." Perhaps housewives are in a position to appreciate the traditional thrusts at "tradesmen." However, what a shame that the beautiful friendship between the butchers and the women had to be terminated! Another casualty of war!

And yet—there are women who pay tribute to the long suffering, patience, poise, and diplomacy of the butchers, the men who at this moment are behind the gun more than any other civilians on the home front.

There are butchers who pay tribute to the women—at least those of them who graciously accept tough chops, who smilingly take hamburger in lieu of chicken, who stand—uncomplainingly until they are ready to drop waiting their turns at the counter, who are civilized enough to point to another customer and say "She was ahead of me," who handle their ration stamps like expert mathematicians, and make their decisions like high-powered executives. After all, fortunately there are women—and butchers, who can take it.

A New Fall Color

If you've found that many of the purple-hued lipsticks give you a slightly bilious look, you might like to try an exciting new shade. Radiant Peony, it's called after its floral namesake. Rather hard to describe this rich color blend, but it's perfect with fall colors—blacks, fuchsias, blues, hunter green.

Radiant Peony lipstick has two companions so that your make-up will be in harmony: a cheek rouge and a nail polish. Each item is about a dollar, more or less.

A Tip From Cleopatra

Perfumed oils were used two thousand years ago and more, but modern women haven't paid them much heed. Now it looks as if scented oil beautifiers were going to make a comeback. Four new oil preparations—for the body, the face, the eyelids, and the lips—have just appeared. Wonderful stuff—designed to smooth and soften, even cleanse, the skin. Don't be alarmed by the word "oil"—these are easily and quickly absorbed and leave no oily aftermath.

The body oil comes in a large bottle for about $4.50, and the others range from about $3.50 to $2.

Take a Deep Breath

That's what you do when you walk through a Redwood Grove in California. If you haven't been there and would like to know how it feels, try a drop of this breath-sweetener. Any one of those times you feel like exchanging the inside of your mouth, a drop or two of this breath deodorizer will set you straight again. This fresh, clean-tasting stuff comes in a small purse flask for about 60 cents (also available in large sizes).

For further information, please call NAtional 4200, extension 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Any exercise can be good, bad or waste motion, depending on how you do it. So when you take your fling at streamlining, go scientific. If you do, you are bound to get the results you are after.

There are several exercises almost every woman could use to advantage. One is to straighten out the posture and another is to firm the muscular girdle and flatten the abdominal curve. You get at some of the same muscles in each. Let's start off with these and go into the more streamlining movements tomorrow.

Position: Sit against a wall with legs crossed in front, tailor fashion, hands down on floor at sides with thumbs and arms touching wall.

Movement: Flatten the entire back against the wall and stretch the neck up, chin level. Pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles as you flatten the small of the back. Now, hold everything and slowly circle arms, without removing thumbs or elbows from wall, until they are straight up overhead. See if you can't stretch a fraction more, then lower arms with shoulders and place hands on shoulder tips. Relax. Repeat three times.

Chance to go wrong: Letting arms and back come off the wall does away with the value of the exercise. Go through the movement very slowly and think about what you are doing. Even when you get it down pat, do not repeat more than 10 times.

Firm Muscular Girdle

Position: Lie on back on floor with feet elevated to chair seat, legs straight, arms down at sides and small of back pressed against floor.

Movement: Bend right knee up to chest, return to position and repeat with left knee. Repeat 12 times to begin with, later 25.

Chance to go wrong: Letting the small of the back come off the floor and forgetting to pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles. The reason for bending knee to chest is to intensify this up-and-in pull.

In those two exercises you tone the arm and shoulder muscles and strengthen your anti-gravity muscles forming the abdominal girdle. They are easy—but don't let that deceive you! They're easy to do wrong, too.

Ration Points

SUGAR—Coupon 14, Book 1, good for 5 pounds through October 31. Stamps 15 and 16, good for 5 pounds each for canning purposes, valid through October 31.

MEATS-FATS—Canned milk, butter, margarine, lard, fats and oils, cheese and canned fish—Red coupons X, Y, Z and brown stamps A and B in War Ration Book No. 3, valid through October 2. Brown stamp C becomes valid Sunday, good through October 30.

PROCESSED FOODS—Canned and frozen vegetables, fruits, soups, juices, etc.—Blue coupons U, V and W valid through October 20.

GASOLINE — Coupons A-6 good for 3 gallons each, but must last through November 21. Coupons B and C, good for 2½ gallons each, expire according to date indicated in individual books.

STOVES—All new domestic heating and cooking stoves designed to burn coal, wood or gas were rationed after August 24, 1943. Consumers will make application to their local boards for stove-purchase certificates. No new rationed stoves may be transferred without the surrender of a stove certificate.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Many a parent feels herself a slacker because she does not busy herself teaching her child both numbers and letters.

She thinks of how handicapped he may be when he goes to school and other children can reel off their numbers and recognize words.

Let her take heart. Whatever a child's previous knowledge, he starts at the same place in school. He is expected to know nothing. If he already knows what is being taught there is nothing to do but to sit and listen until the other children acquire that knowledge.

It once was the practice to advance the precocious child more rapidly. But it was found that while he might have food for his alert mind, socially he suffered by being in competition with older children. Now a child stays in his own grade with children of his own age and tries to find other interests to keep him busy and happy.

Recognizing this, let the mother of the preschool child spend her time teaching him to be an independent and a socialized being.

It will be far better for him to know how to be considerate of the other fellow, give him his turn, accept toys other than the ones he would prefer to have, stand back while others shine, than to be able to know all the numbers to a thousand.

Consideration does not spring to life; it must be taught by example and by experience. It is an asset for a child to be able to get along with all kinds of children and he learns that by being able to play with all kinds, young and old, good and bad.

He learns to judge children on their own merits if he can welcome any child to his home without being quizzed as to the friend's parents and whether the child is someone good enough to play with him.

If the preschool child has been taught to clean his own teeth and finger nails, comb his hair, take a bath, blow his nose, take off and put on his own outer garments, he should be a happier, more independent and more cooperative pupil than if he could read, write and figure.

Let's leave school teaching to school teachers and put our efforts as parents into helping the child become ready for the competitive, indifferent, impersonal world of the school and learn to be happy in it.

Our ideas of what to teach the preschool child are included in the leaflet "How the Child Develops," which may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

Trench Mouth, or Vincent's Infection Can Be Serious; Treatment Suggested

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

For a while it was called "trench mouth," and it may be called acute pyorrhea. Technically it is called Vincent's infection, after the French bacteriologist who discovered the germs which cause it. It is an inflammation of the gums, especially near the tooth margin and beginning with redness and swelling and a little pus formation; it can go on to local gangrene and considerable tissue loss.

It is caused by two germs which are nearly always found together—one is a bacillus and one a long, curly spirillum. One of them or a combination of them is a natural gangrene producer and that is where the trouble begins.

None Immune

When it is said that the condition is due to infection with these germs, the statement leaves out another factor, perhaps two that are really more important than the presence of the germs themselves. Because from everyone's mouth—no matter how clean and healthy—it is possible to culture some Vincent germs. They are on the surface of the gums or teeth and do no harm until they penetrate the tissues and this penetration is due to a lowering of bodily resistance, perhaps poor diet. The other possible factor is that you are used to your own Vincent germs, but if you happen to get someone else's in your mouth you are liable to trouble. Lowered bodily tone then and cross infection are the important factors in acquiring the disease.

Increase in Disease

It would be natural in view of these factors to suppose that at the present time there would be an increase in the amount of cases with Vincent's infection. Great numbers of the population are crowded together in war plants, they are living in cramped quarters, they are subject to fatigue, they get what kinds of food they can, they eat off plates and with knives, forks and spoons that are often not adequately cleaned after the last customer was served. Lowered bodily resistance and cross infection are present everywhere, just as they were in the trenches when the condition got its name of trench mouth.

If taken early when the gums are just beginning to be acutely red and swollen, it can be successfully stopped in four or five days by an experienced dentist. Later on when destructive changes have occurred, restoration is not so easy.

Rules for Treatment

A dentist connected with a large industrial plant has these rules for treatment:

1. Observe complete dish, glass and silverware isolation. Boil dishes for three to five minutes in soap and water.
2. Eat and drink only from paper dishes and cups in public restaurants.
3. Throw away toothbrush and do not brush teeth until told to do so.
4. Eat plenty of green leafy vegetables. Force fluids, juices and milk.
5. Use a mild, antiseptic mouth wash every hour.
6. Use a cathartic or an enema to keep the bowels regular.
7. Make regular visits to dental clinic.
8. Permit no girl with Vincent's infection to handle food or dishes in the kitchen.

To Remove Starch From Iron

Don't lose your mental equilibrium when starch sticks to the bottom of an iron. Instead add an extra pinch of salt to the starch, or sprinkle some salt on a newspaper and run the iron over it.

Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat

For Company Dinners—Star Smoked Beef Tongue!
Even with meat rationing, you can still entertain! Here's how to fix a delicious meat to serve twelve guests . . . for as little as 15 points! (Ask each person to bring 1 meat point.)
Plan your party around beef tongue. Serve it hot, surrounded with a variety of vegetables, or serve it cold, using the recipe given here. Be sure to ask your meat man for Armour's Star Smoked Beef Tongue, weighing from 3 to 3½ pounds. It's a real delicacy . . . a favorite of epicures!
There's no fuss or flurry when you fix beef tongue. Just place it in cold water to cover. Bring to a boil, turn heat low and let simmer 4-4½ hours until tongue is tender. Meanwhile, you can complete your other party plans without giving a thought to your meat!
When tongue is very tender, remove skin and roots and let cool right in cooking water. Then whip together equal parts of softened cream cheese and prepared horseradish. Serve tongue and sauce as shown above.
And here's a tip: Any left-over tongue makes swell sandwiches later!

One of the best ways to make a little meat go all the way around the table and still have some for seconds is to make a casserole dish. Dress up your casserole dishes in the way of the attractive one shown here. This is a lamb-vegetable casserole topped with biscuits.

Designs for Eating Furnished By Spring Lamb Which Comes to Market in Its Prime in September

Spring lamb in September? Certainly. And that is no condition brought about by the war. September is the month when young lamb is at the peak of its season. This is the time when this meat is tender and delicious. So now is the time to make rich, filling stews.

Lamb stew is a favorite dish with men. In fact, I heard a man take lamb stew in preference to a steak when he was given his choice. The tender squares of lamb meat from the breast, neck or shoulder are perfect for stew. None of these cuts require many points.

But be sure you cook the stew just right. Cooking it "just right" means cutting the meat into small squares and then rolling in seasoned flour, or just salt and pepper if preferred, then browning it in a deep frying pan or a heavy stew kettle.

When the browning job is finished, cover the meat with water, add plenty of water, but don't put so much in that the meat goes swimming. Cover the pot tightly and then let the meat cook slowly for about 1½ hours.

Don't just assemble a bunch of vegetables and dump them into the pot all at once. You don't want the vegetables to cook to a mushy consistency. It will take onions, celery, potatoes and carrots longer to cook than it will cabbage.

Those persons who have victory gardens which are still producing can add any vegetables to pieces of lamb and achieve a flavorsome, nutritious main dish. Carrots, tomatoes, onions, celery, potatoes, green peppers, peas, green lima beans, turnip and green beans are all good vegetables to use in stew. If the family likes a touch of garlic, here's a wonderful place to introduce this excellent seasoning, for it will enhance the flavor of the stew. Herbs, too, any of your favorites, will add a special tang.

If you buy lamb breast or shoulder, try cutting it up and browning it. Then simmer in water until tender. Add fresh lima beans or fresh peas along with small carrots and tiny onions and cook the vegetables until tender. Next, place the stew in a casserole and top with a border of mashed potatoes. Sprinkle the potatoes with paprika and then place in the oven so that the peaks of the potatoes become a pleasant brown. This will be about the best and prettiest lamb pie you've ever sunk a tooth into.

The breast, shoulder and neck of lamb can all be cooked to delicious tenderness and then covered with cheese biscuits, dumplings or any of the foods with which you like to top such dishes.

Lamb shanks are delicious when curried and served with rice. Even the gravy will have special appeal. Here is the recipe for preparing this type of dish:

CURRIED LAMB SHANKS WITH RICE

Roll 4 lambs shanks in flour and brown slowly in 2 tablespoons butter, margarine or drippings with 1 onion which has been minced. This will require about 10 minutes. Add 3 cups water, 2 teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and simmer slowly for 1½ hours. When meat is tender, add ½ teaspoon curry powder and thicken the gravy with 1½ tablespoons flour mixed with 1-3 cup cold water. Serve on a bed of fluffy boiled rice with the curry sauce for gravy.

Lamb round-up, with its spicy tomato-flavored sauce, is also a way to a delicious main dish, but requiring few points. Buy boneless breast of lamb and make the dish by this recipe:

LAMB ROUND-UP

Cut 1¼ pounds boneless breast of lamb into narrow strips 1 inch in length. Brown the meat and 1 cup chopped onions in melted fat over low heat. Add 1 cup tomato soup or fresh tomatoes, ½ cup evaporated milk, 2 teaspoons vinegar, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Cover tightly and simmer for 1 hour, adding a small amount of water if necessary. The last 5 minutes add ¼ cup diced green pepper. Put the lamb round-up into serving dish and pile buttered hominy around the edge of the dish. Makes 4 servings.

If you should have some leftover cooked lamb, then fashion yourself some lamb barbecue. This is a recipe which will make a little meat go far and satisfy sturdy appetites. Make it this way:

LAMB BARBECUE

Brown 6 tablespoons finely sliced onion in 2 tablespoons butter, margarine or bacon fat. To the onions add ¾ cup diced celery, ¾ teaspoon dry mustard, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 1½ teaspoons salt and ¾ teaspoon chili powder. Next add 3 tablespoons vinegar, ½ cup water, 1½ cups tomato juice and simmer for 20 minutes. Add 2 cups cooked lamb cut in narrow strips. Cook for about 40 minutes more or until the sauce has thickened and flavored the lamb. Serve the meat in a ring of cooked and seasoned green or dry lima beans. Makes 4 servings.

Lamb kidneys cost but a few points, but they can be made into appealing dishes such as kidney stew, kidneys in wine sauce or kidney en brochette. If you want to make something extra special buy 9 lamb kidneys and prepare them with the wine sauce by the following recipe:

LAMB KIDNEYS IN WINE SAUCE

Remove the skin and cut into thin slices 9 lamb kidneys. Melt in a saucepan 2½ tablespoons butter or margarine. Saute and stir the kidneys quickly in the hot fat. Sprinkle over them and stir in 2 tablespoons flour and ½ teaspoon grated onion. Add slowly, stirring constantly, 1 cup stock or consomme. When the sauce is smooth and boiling season the kidneys with salt and paprika. Remove from fire and add 2 tablespoons sherry or Maderia. Serve hot on toast, sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Buy 1 pound of lamb kidneys. Split the kidneys and remove fat core and tubes. Cover with water which contains 1 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon lemon juice for each quart of water. Let soak for 1 hour, then drain. Cover again with water and bring to a boil. Wash thoroughly and arrange alternately with bacon on skewers. Season. Broil until brown and then turn. Requires about 10 to 12 minutes to broil. Serves 4.

Faces and Places About Washington

"THAT DAY . . . we got two U-boats. Just what you call 'luck' you know . . . but it was exciting . . . like catching two big fish after a long, long struggle."

A tall, handsome Frenchman, with a twinkle in his brown eyes and the coveted Cross of Lorraine on his chest, was talking about some of his experiences in convoy service on the North Atlantic. He was Lieut. Jean Levasseur, former captain of the Fighting French corvette Aconit, and his story made up much of the luncheon table talk the other day at the Lowell street home of Capt. and Mme. Jean George Gayral.

For 26 months in command of a ship that escorted and helped to protect numerous United Nations destroyers and transports, Levasseur stopped off in Washington briefly before going on to Canada, and thence to England where he will take over another ship.

A few days ago the Aconit dropped anchor at New Orleans, and Lieutenant Levasseur bade goodby to the courageous crew and the ship that followed his orders for more than two years. The moment of separation was sad, very sad, he said. "You know, after you've been with a ship that long, leaving her is just like leaving the woman you love. In fact," he went on, smiling, "it's worse . . . because a ship is always dependable."

The Aconit endeared herself particularly to her commander on that thrilling day back in March when she proved her prowess in the line of duty. "We were escorting an Atlantic convoy," said Lieutenant Levasseur, "and were midway across the ocean when we found ourselves in the midst of a pack of submarines. We sank one quickly by gunfire, and hauled her crew aboard. The second gave us more trouble. We spotted her just as she torpedoed the British destroyer, HMS Harvester. We rammed her once, twice; spattered her with gunfire. Finally, she went down. Then we rescued survivors from the Harvester and the submarine and steamed on to a British port."

A Naval Reserve officer, Lieutenant Levasseur was called into service in 1939 and was on duty in Madagascar at the time of Dunkirk. Shortly thereafter, he joined DeGaulle in England and was assigned to duty with the Free (later the Fighting) French navy. His recent visit to Washington was the second. He came here first in 1929; hopes to get back again after the war.

CAPT. AND MME. GAYRAL will leave early next month for Algiers, where he will be given a new tour of duty. For the past 14 months, he has been the official representative of the Fighting French navy in this country, and he and his attractive English-born wife have made a host of friends here. Both say they will remember their "American experience" as highly enlightening; sometimes nerve-wracking; more often pleasant and peaceful.

"After having lived through the blitz in England, we have felt in this country as if we were very far from the war," said Mme. Gayral. "So we want to get back closer to our country; closer to the fighting front," added her husband, who obviously is looking forward to his forthcoming assignment under the French Committee for National Liberation of which General DeGaulle and General Giraud are copresidents.

Ardent DeGaullists, both Captain and Mme. Gayral have several reasons for their devotion to the French general who first established himself as an enemy of Hitlerism. One is that the general introduced the captain to the woman who was to be his wife. She was working for the Free French at the time. The captain, having served as liaison officer between the French and British navies in the Mediterranean, was in Malta when his country's government capitulated. He went at once to England; met General DeGaulle, joined the Free French, met and married the pretty English woman who was working for DeGaulle. Subsequently, he was sent to Portsmouth and then was made commanding officer of the Free French Fleet with headquarters in London. From there, he and Mme. Gayral came to Washington in July, 1942.

Active in work for French relief, Mme. Gayral has made some unusual contributions in talent, as well as time to that cause since she has been in Washington. At one period, she designed costume jewelry which always found a ready market. More recently, she has been making exquisite scarves and handkerchiefs, which are decorated with hand-painted patterns featuring the Lorraine Cross—the badge of those who joined DeGaulle.

BEING HONORED at a dizzying whirl of farewell-for-a-while fetes is the British Embassy's First Secretary, John Foster, who will be off to his homeland sometime soon for an extended stay. He will have charge of the North American division of the British Foreign Office, but he vows, declares, and faithfully promises that he will be back in Washington next February; and that his plans to stand for Parliament are to be kept in abeyance for some time yet.

At a dinner given in his honor by Justice and Mrs. Thurman Arnold the other evening, the genial host paid tribute to Mr. Foster as "one of the most popular members of the British Embassy" and Mrs. Louise Atwill, one of the guests, promptly nominated him as the man "who will one day be Prime Minister." Capt. and Mrs. John Gingrich nodded their approval, and so did Alfred duPont, Maj. and Mrs. John Quaintance, and the rest of us. "Apparently," blushingly averred Mr. Foster, "more Americans than Britishers would be in favor of that."

Dividing honors with Mr. Foster at the dinner was Ensign Thurman Arnold, son of the host and hostess, who is home on leave after many months of naval duty in the Caribbean.

Gen. G. F. Lull Has Returned From South

Brig. Gen. George F. Lull, Deputy Surgeon General of the Army, returned to Washington yesterday after a trip to the South and Middle West, where he fulfilled several speaking engagements.

Among the outstanding events on his calendar was the dedication program at Foster General Hospital, Jackson, Miss., on which he was the principal speaker. Another taking part in the dedicatory exercises was Representative Dan R. McGehee of Mississippi, who also has returned to Washington.

The Foster General Hospital is another of the Army's new hospitals designed to take care of overseas casualties. It was named for the late Col. Charles Lovelace Foster, a native of Mississippi, who obtained his medical degree at Columbia College (now George Washington University) in 1902; was graduated from the Army Medical School in 1904; at one time served in the Surgeon General's office as personnel officer, and died at Walter Reed Hospital in 1941. He and General Lull, who were in charge of Army medical personnel before his present appointment, were close friends.

Commanding officer of the new hospital is Col. Sam F. Parker, who is also widely known in Washington. He was stationed at the Army Medical Center here before being assigned as chief of medical service of the Le Garde General Hospital in New Orleans, the post he held immediately prior to his present one.

Others who had prominent parts in the exercises dedicating the $4,500,000 institution were Col. Sanford W. French, chief of the medical branch, Fourth Service Command, and Mayor Walter A. Scott of Jackson.

Among members of the hospital staff is Lieut. Col. Edmund Horgan, chief of the surgical service, a prominent Washington surgeon. He and Mrs. Horgan, who have been in Mississippi for several months, are very much missed both here and in Virginia, where they had a home and took an active part in fox hunting and social events.

From Mississippi, General Lull went to Two Rivers, Wis., to award an "E" to the Hamilton Manufacturing Co., makers of dental and medical cabinets. He stopped off in Chicago for conferences before returning to Washington.

Launching Community War Fund

Harris & Swins

Instructions and assignments in soliciting advance gifts for the Community War Fund drive, which will get under way next month, are received by Mrs. William J. Flather, jr., section chairman at the left, and Mrs. James McMillan Gibson. The solicitation of nearly 2000 gifts was begun Tuesday at the Hall of Flags in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building when workers selected several names from complete lists of possible advance donors and began work on their individual drives for funds to express the brotherhood of the community. "Crown thy good with brotherhood," a line from the hymn, "America, the Beautiful," has been chosen as the theme of this year's drive for $4,800,000. Abbot P. Mills is chairman of the advance gifts division and vice chairmen are Mrs. Charles C. Glover, jr., Mrs. Paul V. McNutt and Dr. Wilson Compton

Mrs. Borah Back From Visit In West

"I'm just back after the most wonderful seven-week trip," said Mrs. William E. Borah, widow of the Senator, over the telephone yesterday.

"Little Borah," as she is affectionately known to her friends, has been traveling in the West, visiting first in Idaho where she was with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Ben Bush; going from there to Portland, Oreg., where she stayed with her sister, Mrs. Ludermann. If it had been at all possible, Mrs. Borah would have stopped on her way home in Colorado Springs to visit a favorite niece, but the ticketmaster in Portland advised her against making any stops. He even went so far as to say that the ticket office might just as well close as there was a solid booking out of Portland for the next two months.

Portland, Mrs. Borah found, is a whirl of activity with the great shipbuilding companies going at top speed. Even Idaho, once associated with wide open spaces, is crowded with huge Army camps and air bases now dotting the terrain.

Mrs. Nancy Shea Arrives Today From Florida

On her way from Miami, Fla., to Newport, R. I., Mrs. Nancy Shea is in Washington for several days to be the guest of Mrs. W. G. Wyman, wife of Colonel Wyman, at the Wyoming Apartment.

In Newport she will visit Vice Admiral William Satterlee Pye, Commandant at Newport, and Mrs. Pye, the latter as Anne Briscoe Pye, collaborator with Mrs. Shea on the book, "Navy Wife."

Author of "Army Wife," and her most recent book, "The WAACS", dedicated to Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, founder of the bill authorizing the Women's Army Corps, Mrs. Shea's Army background as the wife of a Colonel, has served her admirably for her writings.

As bombs dropped over Pearl Harbor on December 7, Mrs. Shea crouched in mud under her porch. It was then she realized the great need for a women's army.

First Dance For Officers To Be Held Tomorrow

The first in a series of dances sponsored by the Officers' Service Club for the United Nations, will be held tomorrow evening in the Sapphire Room of the Mayflower, beginning at 9 o'clock. Tickets for the dance are sold at the door and when the capacity of the ballroom is reached the sale of tickets is closed for the evening. For that reason it is wise for the officers to arrive promptly.

On October 2 the second dance will be held at the Shoreham ballroom and the following dance, October 9, will be again given at the Mayflower, where they will continue each Saturday evening in October and November.

As is the established custom, especially chosen hostesses will be present to see that the stag officers have a good time and do not lack partners, while members of the dance committee will keep the party running smoothly. The price of the ticket includes beer and soft drinks.

Mrs. Parker Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Howard L. Vickery, wife of Rear Admiral Vickery of the Maritime Commission, was ranking guest at a small luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Herbert Parker at the Mayflower. Later, Mrs. Vickery heard her husband's broadcast from London.

Others at the luncheon included Mrs. Russell Cory of New York and Mrs. Glenn R. Campbell, who will leave soon with her daughter, Miss Naomi Campbell, for Dallas, Tex. Miss Campbell will be married there early in October. Her mother plans to return to Washington October 15.

Returns A Hero From Year On Guadalcanal

Capt. Charles D. Barrett, jr., Won Decoration For Extraordinary Bravery

The distinguished son of an equally distinguished father, Capt. Charles Dodson Barrett, jr., of the United States Marine Corps, is back for station near his home town, Alexandria, after a year on Guadalcanal. Now at Quantico, he is a returning hero and is literally covered with honors.

Carrying out the Marine Corps tradition long upheld by his father, Major General Barrett, who is now in the Southwest Pacific, where he has had a command for the last year, the 22-year-old captain is the wearer of the Silver Star Medal, the Order of the Purple Heart, the Presidential Division Citation and four stars indicating he took part in four major battles.

He and Mrs. Barrett are now living at Quantico while he is on duty at the Marine base as a battalion commander on the staff of the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Class. Mrs. Barrett is the former Miss Austen Brewster, also of a prominent Marine Corps family. She is the daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. David L. S. Brewster.

Won Silver Bars After Three Citations

During his year of duty in the Solomons Captain Barrett, who arrived in the islands as a second lieutenant, earned the silver bars of a first lieutenant after receiving three citations for participation in three major battles.

He won even greater glory in action against the Japanese on October 5, 1942, when he was given a "spot promotion" on the field of battle, an honor accorded only to heroes. It was for that engagement with Emperor Hirohito's men from Nippon that he was made a captain in a second rapid promotion and was awarded the Silver Star Medal with a citation by Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of the South Pacific area.

The jungle battle which occurred while Captain Barrett's company was on a combat patrol is described by Admiral Halsey. The young officer had a platoon which was advancing along a jungle trail when it was ambushed by a well-prepared Japanese unit. According to the admiral's citation:

"Lieutenant Barrett, completely disregarding his own safety, moved forward to the positions of every one of his men, under heavy fire supervised their fire fight, and coordinated the movement of the platoon on his left for an attempted encircling movement.

"When it became apparent that the forces of the enemy were too strong, he coordinated the withdrawal of the platoon and managed to disengage his men successfully, executing the withdrawal with a minimum of casualties."

Made Effort To Save Companions

Relatives of the young officer in Alexandria tell how he crawled forward in the line of fire to pull two dying companions back to cover in one final effort to save them, even though they were fatally wounded.

Captain Barrett subsequently participated in an attack in force on the Japanese position which resulted in the rout of the enemy. Later he was wounded in the second battle of the Matanikau, but remained on the firing line for two days before seeking medical attention for shrapnel wounds in the leg.

He remained on Guadalcanal until December, when Army units relieved the Marines, and returned to the United States to recover from an attack of malaria. For three months he was a patient in the Naval Hospital at San Diego, Calif., and it was while he was on leave on the West Coast that Maj. Gen. William P. Upshur, long a friend of General Barrett, presented the Silver Star to his friend's son at Marine Department headquarters in San Francisco.

Captain Barrett's wife and his mother, who live at 213 South Pitt st., the family's Georgian home across from St. Paul's Episcopal Church, where the general has long been a vestryman, made the trip to California to be with him during his convalescence. They returned to Alexandria upon his recent assignment to Quantico.

Describing the Japanese as soldiers, the young Marine officer said on his return to Alexandria: "The Japanese are good soldiers, but they don't like the bayonet and our grenades are better than theirs.

"A noncommissioned officer, called to me several times, and the Japs were so close that they picked up my name. A little later someone called me, and when I looked up a Jap bullet missed me by a hair. That would really have been one with 'my name on it,' had it gone home."

Left College To Join Marines

Urging that Americans redouble their contributions to the Red Cross blood bank, he observed that donation of blood in the United States is a voluntary service for the war, while in New Zealand it is compulsory. The New Zealanders have a proportion of their population in the armed service which would amount to 30 million Americans overseas by comparison, and their losses have necessitated blood contribution by order, he explained.

Captain Barrett is a graduate of the Episcopal High School in Alexandria, where he won a letter in football. He enrolled at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville as a member of the class of 1942, but interrupted his studies to enlist in the Marines and was commissioned in February of 1942.

Although he and his father saw service in the Pacific theater, their paths did not cross.

The Barretts as a Marine family in Alexandria have a special place in the affections of residents who know them, and many who don't. The rector of their church, St. Paul's, volunteered for duty in the Navy's Corps of Chaplains last fall with the specific request that he be assigned to the Marine Corps for duty under General Barrett of the St. Paul's vestry.

Rector Of Church Is Now Lieutenant

The minister is Lieut. Ernest A. de Bordenave, United States Naval Reserve, who entered the service at the first of this year and has been serving at the Naval Air Station near Hutchinson, Kans., as his initial tour of duty. While he is on leave from the church in Alexandria the Rev. Albert T. Mollegen, professor at the Virginia Episcopal Theological Seminary, is acting rector.

Alexandrians also tell how the senior Mrs. Barrett in receiving letters from her husband and son which mentioned Alexandria boys in the Marine Corps, from privates to those of the commissioned ranks, telephoned the families of each to bring them personal messages from the front.

On Honeymoon Now

PFC. AND MRS. O. MAX GARDNER.

Max Gardner's Son Is Wed In N. Carolina

Of wide interest in Washington as well as in North Carolina is the news of the wedding which took place in Shelby, N. C., on Wednesday, when Miss Sara Hoyle Mull became the bride of Pfc. O. Max Gardner, son of the former Governor of North Carolina, O. Max Gardner, and Mrs. Gardner.

The bridegroom's father was best man for his son and immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Gardner entertained members of the immediate families at a wedding breakfast at the Webb-Gardner Mansion, their Shelby residence.

Following a honeymoon to Lake Lure, the couple will make their home at North Carolina State College, where Pfc. Gardner will take special courses preparatory to entering Officer Candidate School. The bride attended Meredith College, where last spring she was elected May Queen and voted the college's "most attractive girl."

Troth Told

Mrs. Lawrence Johnson of Philadelphia announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Helen Rawes, to Maj. R. Donald McLeod, M. C. Royal Engineers, son of Mrs. Herbert W. Louis Hansens Entertained On Anniversary

Golden wedding bells rang for Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Hansen of Takoma Park, Md., residents of the town for 30 years, last night when friends gave the couple a reception to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary.

Attended by 150 guests, the party was given at the home of Mrs. H. Edson Rogers.

Original poems given by Elder I. H. Evans and Miss Thelma Wellman brought out the high esteem in which the Hansens are held by their friends and neighbors. During the reception held from 8 until 10 o'clock selections were played by Charles Boyd, Dorothea Ising, Veda Mansell and Jean Pleasonts, a string quartet.

Two $50 war bonds were presented as gifts to the Hansens, one by friends attending the party and the other by the Takoma Park Seventh-Day Adventist Church, of which they are members.

J. H. R. Cromwell To Be "Emcee" At Club Cabaret

James H. R. Cromwell, former Minister to Canada, will be master of ceremonies at a cabaret show for United Nations Club members on Sunday at the home of his mother, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury. Mrs. Stotesbury is still at Bar Harbor, where she spent the summer.

Lieut. Comdr. Kenneth Downey of the British Embassy, a former opera singer, will sing several numbers for the cabaret. Several of her new compositions will be played by Mrs. Dorothy Norman, a United Nations Club board member, who has broad musical background of stage appearances and musical compositions. Roy Comfort, a Philadelphia violinist, will play.

A treasure hunt, to begin at 4 o'clock, is also being planned. Later a buffet supper will be served and there will be dancing. Members may also play badminton and pingpong.

Mrs. Stapleton Gives Dinner For Lady Mallet

Among the parties being given for the visiting Lady Mallet, widow of the former British Minister to Panama, Costa Rica and Uruguay, was the dinner at the Shoreham on Wednesday evening at which Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton was hostess.

Among the guests were the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Jimenez, the Ambassador of Guatemala, Adrian Recinos, the former Minister to Panama and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Mae L. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Renchard, Merritt Swift and Sidney K. Lafoon.

Couple to Live in Arlington on Return

Now on a wedding trip to New York are Mr. and Mrs. Francis James Detorie, who upon their return will make their home in Arlington.

The bride is the former Miss Dorothy Louise Davis, daughter of Mrs. Joe Orr Davis of Silver Spring, and Mr. Detorie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Detorie of Arlington. Their marriage took place September 22 in St. Martin's Catholic Church. Officiating at the high noon service was the Rev. T. A. Miltenberger.

Given in marriage by her uncle, J. R. Brownley, the bride wore her aunt's wedding dress of white crepe trimmed with seed pearls. Her train-length veil of tulle was held with a cap of the same material and she carried a bouquet of gladioli and orchids. Mrs. Robert Bloch, the matron of honor, was costumed in coral crepe and carried Talisman roses. Larry Detorie was his brother's best man and ushering were Robert Brownley and Robert Swarr.

A reception followed at the home of the bridegroom's parents in Arlington. Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of the University of Maryland.

Two Boys Held for 29 Robberies Report Their Loot Stolen

Two teen-age sons of Government workers, being held on 58 charges in connection with 29 housebreakings in the Georgetown vicinity, are themselves victims of two juvenile thieves, police revealed yesterday. Loot, it is estimated, will run in the thousands of dllars.

The "original" offenders, after being arrested on the housebreaking charges, complained that the basement den in which they had been hiding the loot had been burglarized. They had been doing some investigating of their own and gave the police the names of two suspects, members of a rival neighborhood gang.

Patrolmen Andrew Scheible and S. P. Smith of the Seventh Precinct, who made the arrests, doubted the story at first.

"But we found a little later that it was the truth," Officer Scheible said. "We located the kids who had been stealing from the hideout. No charges have been placed against them."

Police valued the total loot seized from the den and already retrieved from the pair of rivals at $1500. Included, he said, were radios, jewelry, expensive whisky, cameras, cigarettes and other articles.

Exhibition Here To Display Hyde Park Collection

The President's documentary and art materials collection will be removed for the first time from the library at Hyde Park for a special exhibit at the National Archives, under whose jurisdiction the library has been built.

A preview of the specimen collection will be held at the Archives on Friday, October 1, and the exhibit will be open to the public from October 2 to November 15. Since travel restrictions have cut down the number of people able to view the materials, it was planned to bring them to the Capital for open showing.

Included in the exhibit will be various items relating to the Casablanca conference, a model of "Old Ironsides" made at the navy yard shortly after 1812, letters to the President from distinguished Americans, and a painting of Marrakech, Morocco, by Winston Churchill.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 23 (AP). Prof. Henry Gray Barbour, 57, research associate in pharmacology and toxicology in the Yale School of Medicine, died today of a heart attack. He was considered an outstanding authority on body temperatures.

After being graduated at Trinity College, Johns Hopkins, and studying abroad, he taught at McGill University, Montreal, and the University of Louisville before coming to Yale in 1931. He was born in

Rites to Be Held At St. Anthony's For Mrs. Kinslow

Requiem mass for Mrs. Nellie L. Kinslow, 72, a resident of the District for more than 50 years, will be sung today at 9 a. m. at St. Anthony's Church. Mrs. Kinslow, who lived at 1009 Evarts st. ne., died Tuesday after an illness of two weeks.

For nearly 30 years she served as manager of the Washington office of the Wilcox & Gibbs Sewing Machine Co. She was the wife of William E. Kinslow who was employed in the Washington Navy Yard before his death 24 years ago.

Surviving are a son, Edward Earl Kinslow of Washington, a daughter, Mrs. Marie L. Mullen of Chicago; a sister, Mrs. Michael Crome of Washington, and three grandchildren.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Canon Wedel's Son Escapes as Shell Kills 3 Buddies

Seeing his three companions in a Munda Island foxhole killed by explosion of a Japanese mortar shell that landed squarely in the hole and escaping unscathed, was the experience on August 2 of Lieut. Carl Wedel of 3504 Woodley rd. nw. related in a dispatch from Army Headquarters in the South Pacific received in Washington last night.

The story was told by Wedel, who said he was "the luckiest man alive," on his return to headquarters from New Georgia Island.

Encountering enemy fire on the island, they made ready to spend the night in the foxhole and were crouched down in the foxhole when the shell struck.

Wedel landed with the Thirty-seventh Division on New Georgia, the division arriving without casualties despite heavy artillery fore.

He joined the Army two months after his graduation with A.B. degree from Yale in June, 1941. His parents are Canon O. T. Wedel of Washington Cathedral and Mrs. Wedel.

U. S. Gypsum Files Suit as Test Of WLB's Powers

In a major test of the powers of the War Labor Board the U. S. Gypsum Co. filed suit yesterday in District Court asking that the President and the War Labor Board be forbidden to compel the company to comply with WLB orders affecting union membership and union dues check-off. The action is based on only one of the company's plants, that of Warren, Ohio, where 150 are employed.

The WLB, in a case ending May 31, ordered the company to grant a five cent hourly increase and to maintain union membership and institute the check-off system. The company refused to comply, claiming the WLB was interfering with its constitutional freedom and with that of its employes. The current action is based on the company's order of May 31.

In its suit, the company, through Attorneys Joseph H. Batt and John E. MacLeish contends it is now threatened with withdrawal of priorities, any benefits or privileges extended, war contracts, and it is even possible that the President could order seizure of the Ohio plant if he deemed it necessary.

Woman Plunges To Her Death From Taft Bridge

An unidentified red-haired woman plunged more than 100 feet to her death from Taft Bridge, Connecticut ave. and Calvert st. nw., last night.

The woman, about 45, fell a few feet from a defense guard, according to Earl E. Coates, Negro, of 2511 Q st. nw., who called police.

Neatly clothed in a navy blue coat and light blue and white-flowered dress, the woman had a small purse in the pocket of her coat, containing 77 cents. She wore a navy straw hat and high-heeled pumps. A pair of glasses was found on the bridge. An Emergency Hospital physician pronounced her dead. Acting Coroner Christopher J. Murphy is investigating.

The body was removed to the District Morgue.

Ships Are Costing Less In Britain Than in U. S.

London, Sept. 23. (AP)—Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery of the U. S. Maritime Commission, broadcasting to American shipyard workers after a tour of British yards, declared today that cargo vessels are being built in the United Kingdom at less cost in manhours than in the United States. Admiral Vickery spoke over the Blue Network.

Curley Posts Bond On Mail Fraud, Conspiracy Charge

Representative Curley (Democrat) of Massachusetts, indicted with five others on charges of mail fraud and conspiracy, appeared in District Court yesterday when he posted $2500 to assure his appearance Monday when he is to be arraigned.

A blanket bond of $2500 was set by Justice James M. Proctor for each of the defendants. They are Donald Wakefield Smith, former Nation Labor Relations Board member; James B. Underwood, on furlough from the Greek Air Force; James F. Fuller, now serving a five-year sentence for sending fraudulent securities through the mails; Marshall J. Fitzgerald, a lobbyist, and Bertram Hall of Dallas, Tex.

Except for Fuller, who will be brought from Atlanta Federal Penitentiary for arraignment, all have posted bond.

Youth's Death Laid to Drowning In Fountain Pool

Roland Brice, 19, of Galena, Md., a handyman at the home of Robert Mathers, 3561 36th st. nw. for the past six weeks, was found dead in his employer's yard yesterday.

Police said the young man had fallen at the edge of a fountain basin, containing about 5 inches of water, after apparently suffering a stroke of epilepsy. His head, officers said, was partially submerged in the water, and he may have drowned after being stricken with the convulsion.

An autopsy to determine whether death resulted from a stroke or drowning had not been completed last night. The victim's temple was cut when his head struck the sharp edge of the pool, police said. The body, discovered by the employer, was removed to the Morgue.

Vast Expenditures May Force Raising Of U. S. Debt Limit

Congress may be asked soon to boost the national debt limit to 300 billion dollars.

Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri of the House Appropriations Committee told reporters yesterday the present rate of Government spending is approaching the present statutory debt limit of 210 billion dollars.

He estimated the present spending rate at between seven billion and eight billion dollars monthly.

A 300 billion dollar limit, Cannon said, may be sufficient "if the war doesn't last too long."

Present prospects, he said, are that war appropriations, which reached a peak for the current fiscal year, will begin to decline next year.

I Must Find an Apartment or Leave Washington!

I'm working for an important Govt. War Agency—I like my work (even though I came 1,000 miles out of retirement, giving up fishing and golf), but unless I can find a nice, cheerfully furnished apartment, preferably with 2 bedrooms (or a small furnished home), my wife, who has grown used to me after 33 years, threatens to move to Reno. I love my wife more than my boss, however. I'll pay $100 to $150 per month to keep them both happy.

14 Roomers Well Prepared Upon Eviction of Landlady

By Helene Champlain
Post Staff Writer

Despite the fact that 14 tenants were forced to seek new quarters, nobody argued when deputies of the United States marshal's office took over a rooming house at 800 East Capitol st. yesterday for nonpayment of rent by their landlady.

Only furniture was evicted.

The former tenants of the rooming house, sensing probable eviction although they had never been officially notified, had already found other homes or were in search of them. While the majority had paid their own rent on time, they nevertheless faced the possibility of being put out because the landlady had not paid the house rent.

No More Headaches

And the former landlady viewed the proceedings contentedly, glad to be rid of the "headaches and exsure themselves of a home whether rooming house.

Mrs. Marie Allen, Navy Yard employe who now resides at 814 East Capitol st., had been running the commercial residence for about seven years, renting the home through Hohenstein Bros. There were the usual landlord-tenant relations through the years, and then, when Mrs. Allen failed to pay the $135 rent due on July 1, the rental agents filed suit.

Rumors of the court action meanwhile reached the subtenants, who were amazed to learn that, although they were paying their rents regularly (aggregating some $375 to $400), they faced possible eviction for nonpayment of rental fees.

Court Appeal Futile

The confused roomers, aware of Washington's housing shortage, began to file motions in court to aspense" of operating a wartime Mrs. Allen was in arrears or not, but in every instance they were overruled.

Finally admitting laws were laws, they moved out, one by one. The last pair were gone yesterday morning—one stopped at a friend's house while in search of a new residencec, the other dumped his clothes into the back seat of his cab and wondered what to do with his bicycle.

When the marshal's representatives arrived to make the eviction official, only furniture, mortgaged by Mrs. Allen for recent repairs, was on hand. Movers were loading it for future auctioning by Adam A. Weschler.

Mrs. Allen, meanwhile, sighed, "I worried about that house so much. I'm glad it's all over now."

1500 Attend Funeral of Mission Head

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

An estimated 1500 persons, including church leaders, a detachment of Signal Corps soldiers, the Washington baseball club owner and others attended the funeral yesterday of Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of the Central Union Mission, who died Sunday.

Services were held amid floral tributes in the auditorium of Calvary Baptist Church 8th and H sts. nw., where her late husband, John S. Bennett, often conducted the mission's annual meetings.

Lavish With Praise

Eulogies were given by Edward H. DeGroot, jr., chairman of the Mission's board of directors; Dr. G. Freeley Rohrer, president of the Mission's ministerial council and Mrs. Bennett's former pastor; Mr. and Mrs. William T. Ramsey, for many years interested in the Mission; Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, and others.

Among the mourners were Maj. Edward Kelly, superintendent of Metropolitan Police; his predecessor, Maj. Ernest W. Brown; Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Baseball Club; W. W. Everett, vice president of Woodward & Lothrop's, and Dr. John W. Rustin and Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, president and executive secretary, respectively, of the Federation of Churches.

Many Joe Smith's There

There were many "Joe Smiths" there too—people who got back on the path of respo.tability because Mrs. Bennett and her husband, who died in 1937, gave them a lift. The Bennetts came here in 1915.

Central Union Mission is being used for soldiers' weekend lodgings for the duration. So yesterday a group of Signal Corps men who have been "mothered" by Mrs. Bennett at the Mission came to pay their last respects. They gave a standing tribute. One of them, Sergt. Edward Wright, sang "Living for Jesus," one of Mrs. Bennett's favorite hymns. A group of four young men and women who were raised at the Mission also stood in homage.

Marjorie Webster of the Mission Women's Evening Auxiliary, recited The 23d Psalm, Mrs. Bennett's favorite psalm; Homer J Rodeheaver, once evangelist "Billy"Sunday's song leader, and his sister, Mrs. Ruth Rodeheaver Thomas, sang several hymns Mrs. Bennett lov[illegible].

A special police detail, under Capt. Robert Pearce of No. 1 Precinct, handled the funeral traffic. The body was buried in Fort Lincoln Cemetery beside that of John S. Bennett.

GAR Rejects Plan to Abandon Annual Sessions

Milwaukee, Sept. 23 (AP).—Come peace or continued war, the Grand Army of the Republic will meet again.

Rejecting a proposal to discontinue their annual encampments for the duration, the veterans of the Civil War today chose Des Moines, Iowa, for their seventy-eighth meeting next year.

Selected to lead them at that convention was George H. Jones, 94, of Oxford, Me., unanimously named commander in chief. William H. Osborn of Joplin, Mo., 100, also had been nominated, but declined in favor of Jones, who will succeed John S. Dumser, 94, of Oakland, Calif.

Thirty-five veterans, ranging in age from 92 to 106, attended the seventy-seventh encampment, which closed today.

Roosevelt Orders Plant Returned to Private Operation

The Atlantic Basin Iron Works, Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., which was taken over by the War Shipping Administration September 4 on grounds it refused to obey a War Labor Board order, yesterday was ordered returned to private operation.

An Executive order made public by the White House said President Roosevelt had found the "productive efficiency of the said plant prevailing prior to the taking possession thereof has been restored."

The plant was seized by the Government when it refused to sign an agreement with the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers Union (CIO) involving maintenance of membership and grievance and arbitration procedure.

Broadcast News Policy Defended By CBS Official

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Paul W. White, director of news broadcasts of the Columbia Broadcasting System, defending Columbia's "long-established polices of letting the radio listener make up his own mind," said today in an address at a luncheon of radio news analysts that "it is for the same reason that we have repeatedly refused to sell time for the presentation of one-sided viewpoints.

"Were we to do this, we would be selling—and selling out—the great power of broadcasting to the particular groups able to or willing to spend the most money," he said.

Cecil Brown, commentator, announced his resignation yesterday, saying White had objected to his August 25 broadcast, in which he said "a good deal of enthusiasm for this war is evaporating into thin air" over the lack of good presentation of the news, particularly at the Quebec conference. Brown said White called it "nothing but an editorial defeatist talk, a statement of what Cecil Brown thought."
